

The ARK/Epstein Network.

ARK, Absolute Return for Kids, is the international children's charity, with children in at least 20 countries, programming Noahide, Epstein's Zion.

ARK held fundraisers every year from 2002 to 2012. Irrespective that ARK has never released names of those who attended these events, as many as 1,200 guests, over 100 people have now been linked to both ARK as well as Jeffrey Epstein and/or Ghislaine Maxwell.

Quote: "The Catholic Church is responding to the rising demand for education in the global south. In sub-Saharan Africa, 11.0% of all primary school students are in a Catholic school... The fact that Catholic primary schools serve proportionally more students in low income countries is good news for the mission of the Church to serve the poor."

Jeffrey Epstein's victim Maria Farmer's interview: They honest to God think their DNA is better than everybody else's....these people truly believe that they are chosen, to do something here....only jews are human and the rest of human beings are like cattle.

<http://www.scribd.com/doc/21817010/Academies-Boarding>
Academies are injecting the best of the DNA of private schools into the state funded sector, and the engagement of private schools is a key objective of the programme. Anthony Seldon, Master of Wellington College, describes how the Wellington Academy on Salisbury Plain will replicate the best of Wellington College, without the fees barrier. In particular, the academy will develop a centre of excellence in the education of children from military families, a mission which Wellington Academy has in common with Wellington College. As part of this, the academy will have two boarding houses, developed by boarding staff at the College. As a beneficiary myself of an assisted boarding education, I am keen to see if boarding education could play a larger role in academies, to benefit vulnerable children and those from highly mobile families.

Wellington College, an independent school in Berkshire founded by Queen Victoria and the prime minister in 1859 as a national memorial to the Duke of Wellington, decided in 2006 that it would sponsor an academy. Our governors were attracted by the idea of extending opportunities similar to those available at Wellington to a wider group of students educated in the state system. They were impressed by the argument that the 'DNA' of Wellington College could be deployed elsewhere to inform the founding ideals and purpose of a new state school. In our case, that means a commitment to all-round education, our eight aptitudes, 1 pupil well-being, outdoor activities and the Combined Cadet Force. The academy would also have a strong house system, with the house names at Wellington College replicated, and boarding. 700 of our 850 pupils are boarders. It is very much in our genes.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Harris_Federation
Controversies
 Some of the schools within the federation were formerly run by local authorities, and forced by central government to become academies as part of the Harris Federation against the wishes of 94% of the parents and boards of governors. There was national media coverage over Downhills Primary School (now Harris Primary Academy Philip Lane),[22] where it was reported that 94% of parents opposed the change to academy status.[23]

Box 3.4: The New Schools Network

The NSN has strong links with Absolute Return for Kids (ARK) and other academy sponsors. The organisation has among its trustees Amanda Spielman, research and development director of ARK Schools, who was recently a member of the Sykes review group commissioned by Michael Gove to review the future of the English qualifications and school assessment system, alongside ARK's education director and first headteacher of Mossbourne Academy, now Chief Inspector of Schools, Michael Wilshaw. It also has as a trustee Sir Bruce Liddington, Director General of E-ACT, a multi-academy sponsor, and formerly head of the Academies Division of DCSF and Schools Commissioner for England, and Ian Cleland, Chief Executive of the Ormiston Academies Trust, another multi-academy sponsor. Heath Monk, one of NSN's advisers, is Chief Executive of the Future Leaders programme and the former Deputy Schools Commissioner. Sally Morgan is another NSN adviser who is also an adviser to the ARK Board. She is a former Director of Government Relations at 10 Downing Street and senior adviser to Tony Blair, as was Professor Julian Le Grand, also an NSN adviser. Baroness Morgan is also a Governor of Belvedere School, a Girls' Public Day School Trust school-turned-academy that has been heavily supported by Peter Lampl, founder of the Sutton Trust. Also on the Board of NSN is Theodore Agnew, a trustee of Policy Exchange. Another NSN trustee, Christine Homer, formerly part of Andrew Adonis's academy team, worked on the Havelock Academy as adviser to the David Ross Foundation. Toby Eccles, another NSN adviser, is former UBS associate and head of research with ARK, and a non-executive director of Antidote, a charity developing emotional intelligence in schools, and also Development Director of Social Finance, a charity bank founded by leading city financiers. NSN also has international links, for example through its adviser James Merriman, chief executive officer of the New York City Charter School Center, which serves as a resource and facilitator for new charter schools.

A Conservative minister in the House of Lords has resigned attacking the government's handling of fraudulent Covid business loans.

Lord Agnew accused the Treasury of having "little interest in the consequences of fraud to our society".

But he said his departure was "not an attack on the prime minister".

Last year, the National Audit Office criticised the government for failing to implement measures to prevent people exploiting Covid schemes.

- Bounce Back Loan fraud checks called inadequate

Lord Agnew, a Treasury minister with responsibility for cross-government efficiency, said "a combination of arrogance, indolence and ignorance" was "freezing the government machine".

He accused the government of making "schoolboy errors" by giving loans to over 1,000 companies who were not trading when Covid struck.

"I hope that as a virtually unknown minister beyond this place giving up my career might prompt others to get behind this and sort it out," he said.

In a dramatic moment in the House of Lords, he read out his resignation speech in response to a question from Labour about the £4.3bn of Covid loans written off by the Treasury.

He concluded with a "thank you and goodbye", before marching out of the chamber to a round of applause - a rare occurrence in the Lords.

A No 10 spokesman said: "We are grateful to Lord Agnew for the significant contribution he has made to government."

Millionaire hedge fund bosses Sir Paul Marshall and Ian Wace make £50m on coronavirus crash

- Here's how to help people impacted by Covid-19

Millionaire hedge fund bosses Sir Paul Marshall and Ian Wace have made more than £50million from the collapse of leisure stocks as the coronavirus outbreak grips London markets.

Their Knightsbridge-based firm Marshall Wace placed huge bets on falling share prices, its disclosures reveal.

It holds half the declared short-selling contracts in travel firm Tui and the entire short position in hotel group Intercontinental, which have been hit by travel bans.

<https://www.scotsman.com/heritage-and-retro/heritage/superwealth-sweeps-into-island-as-millionaires-vision-take-shape-3386650>

Over the summer, millionaire hedge fund manager Ian Wace opened up his island of Tanera Mòr, served up hog roast and shared his little piece of the Summer Isles with around 300 visitors. It was a big day for a private man seeking to build a retreat from the real world.

Mr Wace's invitation satisfied some curiosity on the Coigaich peninsula about what the island, which he bought in 2017 for £1.7m and has since developed at rapid pace, is to become. The neighbouring island of Fada has also recently been purchased.

Looking over from Achiltibuie on the Coigaich peninsula, locals are watching Tanera Mòr beat with activity. Up to 150 people can be working there on any given day, with croft houses restored and new ones built, roads laid and paths dug under the management of Summer Isles Enterprises.

Mr Wace, a Conservative donor whose company Wace Marshall heavily profited from short selling of shares in leisure companies that crashed during Covid-19, is married to model Saffron Aldridge, with the couple's royal connections, social circle and high value philanthropy well documented.

Mr Wace's charity for child education had an income of £13.8m last year.

Tony Blair: We will need to learn to live with coronavirus

24 July 2020

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Blair attended the independent school Fettes College, and studied law at St John's College, Oxford, where he became a barrister. He became involved in Labour politics and was elected to the House of Commons in 1983 for the Sedgefield constituency in County Durham. As a backbencher, Blair supported moving the party to the political centre of British politics. He was appointed to Neil Kinnock's shadow cabinet in 1988 and was appointed shadow home secretary by John Smith in 1992. Following the death of Smith in 1994, Blair won the 1994 Labour Party leadership election to succeed him. His tenure as leader began with a historic rebranding of the party, who began to use the campaign label New Labour. The name dates from a conference slogan first used by the party in 1994, later seen in a draft manifesto which was published in 1996 and titled New Labour, New Life for Britain, and was presented as the brand of a newly reformed party.

Ark Patronage

Ark would not exist without our Patrons. Every pound of patronage donated allows us to raise five times more in donations through government and third party funding. This has enabled us to leverage £460m from governments and partners in ten years.

Patronage allows Ark to promise donors that 100% of their gift will go directly to our programmes which transform children's lives in the UK and across the world. Three out of four donors consider this essential when making the decision to give. For this reason, our patrons play a crucial role in our funding model and are at the very core of Ark.

PATRONAGE

Patronage includes the following benefits:

- Events: Invitations to a range of private events to meet fellow Patrons and members of the Ark family, including an annual exclusive Patrons dinner hosted by one of our Trustees. Guest speakers at Ark events have included Boris Johnson, Bill Clinton and the Duke of Cambridge.
- Recognition: Acknowledgement of your patronage on Ark's main communications channels including our website and annual review. For corporate patrons, we will provide marketing materials so that you can promote your patronage via your website, email and other avenues.
- Opportunity to get involved: Meetings with Ark staff to find out how your support impacts the lives of children. In addition, you will be invited to join an annual trip to one of our programmes in Africa, Europe or Asia so you can experience first-hand Ark's work. For corporate patrons, members of the Ark team can give informal talks and arrange Skype sessions for your employees with our overseas programme teams about the work your company's patronage supports.
- Information: Regular updates about our programmes, including our fortnightly Ark Highlights email giving you an insider's view of our activity and progress. You'll also receive reports on the programmes of your interest which outline our progress and impact.

To find out more about becoming an Ark patron, contact Michael.Clark@arkonline.org

Bloomberg Philanthropies Announces New $40 Million Coronavirus Global Response Initiative

Coronavirus Local Response Initiative to Begin Virtual Convenings of U.S. Mayors on March 19

NEW YORK – Just days after Mike Bloomberg launched a program to help American mayors improve their coronavirus response, Bloomberg Philanthropies today announced additional actions and funding to combat the pandemic on a global scale. The new $40 million global initiative will support immediate action to prevent or slow the spread of COVID-19 in vulnerable low- and middle-income countries. Bloomberg Philanthropies will partner with the global health organization Vital Strategies on global response efforts, along with the World Health Organization (WHO), to support lower income countries and cities respond to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Hedge fund elite dig deep for Ark dinner

By Louise Armitstead
11:00PM BST 04 Jun 2009

More than 900 traders, managers and bankers were joined at the event by celebrities including "it girl" Tara Palmer-Tompkinson, BBC Top Gear presenter Jeremy Clarkson and retail tycoon Sir Tom Hunter.

The dinner was staged at the disused international terminal at Waterloo station, which hosted two Orient Express trains for the evening.

Diners, including Stanley Fink of International Standard Asset Management and Ian Wace of Marshall Wace, enjoyed 28-day aged fillet of Irish longhorn beef or black cod glazed with sweet okasan white miso. Tables of 10 cost up to £100,000.

The guests were entertained by saxophonist Julian Smith from ITV's Britain's Got Talent.

The event was organised by Absolute Return for Kids (Ark), a children's charity set up by Arpad "Arki" Busson, the French financier married to actress Uma Thurman.

It was supposed to be more low-key this year to reflect the financial difficulties but celebrities turned out again to encourage the traders to spend. Nelson Mandela had written a note of support.

Raffle tickets cost an extra £5,000. Prizes included five Fiat 500s hand-painted by Damien Hirst. One auction lot included a jaunt for 12 aboard Mark Getty's yacht Tailtha. Another was a trip for 27 people to Sir Richard Branson's Necker Island, the lot included dinner with Sir Richard.

Other prizes included a Ferrari-hosted trip to the paddock at the Monaco Grand Prix and an engine part signed by Michael Schumacher.

The dinner, held for the past seven years, has turned into one of the biggest fund-raisers in the world. Three years ago, the guests raised a record-breaking £28m. In total, the event has raised £120m for Ark in seven years. This has been ploughed into six inner-city "academy" schools in the UK.

The airline Virgin Atlantic asked its staff to take eight weeks off without pay in the next three months, but is demanding a €8.5 billion bailout for its industry. Billionaire boss Richard Branson is now taking the heat.

When Virgin Records signed The Sex Pistols in 1976, the band's Machiavellian manager Malcolm McLaren reportedly took the label's owner Richard Branson for a "naive hippy." But the Brit was soon taken aback at how ruthless and canny he was, according to Spiked magazine. This may not be the worst caricature of the grinning 70-year-old wunderkind of British business.

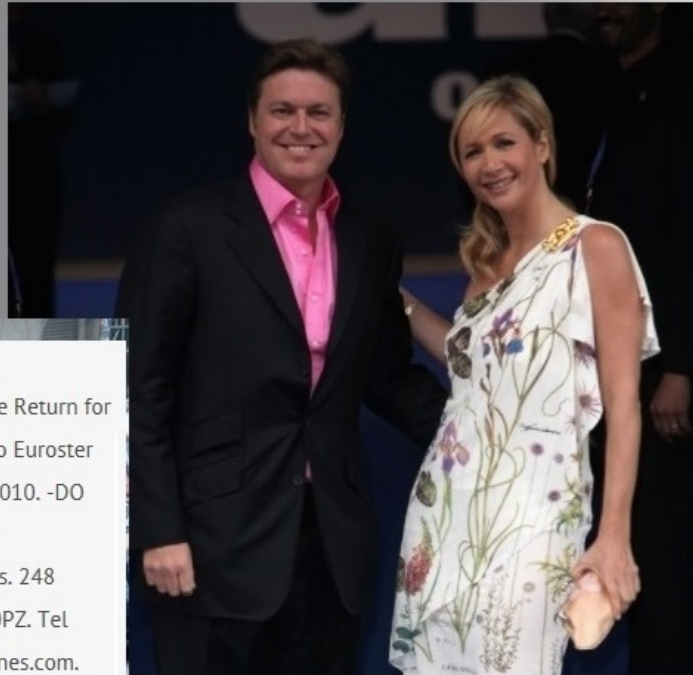

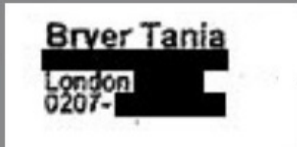

The billionaire has come under heavy criticism recently after his airline, Virgin Atlantic, requested its staff take eight weeks unpaid leave during the coronavirus pandemic. At the same time, Virgin Atlantic, in which Branson owns a majority stake, also called for a 7.5-billion-pound (€8.6-billion, $9.4-billion) bailout for the airline industry as a whole. UK-based Virgin plans to ground up to 85% of its fleet at points in April.

Airlines, retail and the hospitality are among the worst hit sectors as the global economy stops. Stelios Haji-Ioannou's Easyjet also demanded staff take unpaid leave and asked for huge state aid to help avoid making hundreds of people redundant. The firm also simultaneously confirmed plans for a 174-million-pound dividend payout to shareholders, including 60 million pounds for Haji-Ioannou himself, The Times reported.

Arpad Busson

André Arpad Busson (born 27 January 1963) is a French financier. Busson starting working in hedge funds in 1986 working in New York.^[1] He is the founder and chairman of the EIM Group, a fund of funds company. Busson is also active in a number of philanthropic causes around the globe. According to the French business magazine Challenges, he has a net worth of €290 million at 2013.

Early life [edit]

Arpad Busson's father, Pascal Busson, was a former French army officer and Algerian War veteran, who later turned financier.^[2] His mother, Florence "Flockie" Harcourt-Smith, was an English former debutante. His parents met in Paris and named their son after the Hungarian-born banker Arpad Plesch (1889–1974), who not only was Florence's step-father (he was the second husband of her mother, Marysia Ulam Krauss Harcourt-Smith), but had also been her step-grandfather (Plesch's first wife, Leonie Caro Ulam, was his second wife's mother).^[3] Plesch was a mentor to Italy's richest man, Gianni Agnelli, the late head of Fiat.^[4] Busson's aunt, Joanna Harcourt-Smith, was a companion of Timothy Leary, who coincidentally was married in the early 1960s to Nena von Schlebrügge, the mother of Arpad's partner Uma Thurman.^[5]

Busson is sometimes known by his nickname "Arki", a childhood conflation of Arpad and his mother Florence's nickname, Flockie.^[6]

Some sources have suggested that, while growing up in France, Busson made early profits selling toothpicks door-to-door (which he denies),^[7] but he was educated in France and at the Institut Le Rosey in Switzerland. He then passed through national service as a medical orderly in the French army, of which a friend said: "He loved the discipline of the army – it was the making of him".^[8]

As he often refuses to give interviews, stories surround Busson – the story about Fawcett is that they met on the French Riviera. The story is only partly true, in that it was perpetuated by the gossip columnist "Taki" as a sort of in-joke: Taki knew Busson's mother, who was friends with Fawcett.^[7]

Finance career [edit]

Busson entered the world of hedge funds in 1986 working with Dublin Swicā.^[9] He was later employed as a marketing representative for Paul Tudor Jones's fund Tudor Investments.

In 1991, Busson founded the EIM Group to provide fund-of-fund management services to the growing institutional market for hedge funds.^[10] On 8 December 2008, EIM Group was reported as being a victim of Bernie Madoff's Ponzi scheme.^[11]

In November 2001, EIM, an asset management company run by Busson, was asked by the FBI to help trace the finances of al-Qaida.^[12] The FBI noted that the firm was not a target of the investigation, and was cooperating fully.^[13]

In December 2013, Busson merged his EIM group with Swiss listed investment company Gottex Fund Management Holdings.^[14]^[15] In July 2015, Busson was named the next executive chairman of Gottex Fund Management for the interim, following Joachim Gottschalk stepping down from the position and finding a permanent executive chairman.^[16]

Gottex Fund Management rebranded itself as LumX and was eventually delisted from the Swiss Stock Exchange in June 2020 after suffering losses of more than $55 million the previous five years, essentially ending Busson's time as a hedge fund manager.^[17]^[18]

Charity [edit]

Main article: Absolute Return for Kids

Busson is a proponent of "venture philanthropy",^[19] which seeks to multiply the effectiveness of charitable pursuits by applying to them the same management practices which are used in business ventures.

He is a founding trustee of the children's charity ARK (Absolute Return for Kids) and serves as chairman of its board of directors.^[20] Busson held the post of Chairman since the charity's inception. He stepped down from that position in 2009 but remains a member of the Board as founding chairman, and as chairman of ARK US. ARK raises charitable contributions from the hedge fund industry for children who are victims of abuse, disability, illness and poverty. ^[citation needed] ARK finances and manages projects aimed at transforming the lives of children in Eastern Europe, South Africa and the UK through education and healthcare.^[21]

The annual Ark Dinner hosted by Busson sees a range of high-profile individuals attend the event to raise money for the charity. Previous years have seen the likes of Bill Clinton (2006),^[22] Queen Rania of Jordan (2010)^[23] and in 2011 the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge took the limelight as Prince William announced a joint venture by the Foundation of Prince William and Prince Harry and the Ark charity.^[24]

Its activities include funding treatment for AIDS victims in Africa, taking children out of care in Bulgaria and Romania and developing educational opportunities for disadvantaged children in India.^[25] It also operates eight academies, six of which are in London, through its subsidiary charity ARK Academies.^[26]

Busson says of ARK, "If we can apply the entrepreneurial principles we have brought to business to charity, we have a shot at having a really strong impact, to be able to transform the lives of children."^[4]

He is a patron of the Elton John AIDS Foundation^[27] and a founding member of Theodora Children's Trust,^[28] a charity which brings music, magic and laughter to children in hospital through visits from performers known as "Giggle Doctors".

Personal life [edit]

Busson began a relationship with Australian supermodel Eile Macpherson in 1996.^[29] They have two sons together: Arpad Flynn Busson, known as Flynn (born February 1998 in New York City),^[30] and Aurelius Cy Andrea Busson (born February 2003 in London).^[31] The family lived together in London until Busson and Macpherson's separation in July 2005.^[29]

Busson began dating American actress Uma Thurman in 2007^[32] and they announced their engagement in June 2008.^[33] In December 2009, it was reported that the two had ended their engagement,^[34] but they reconciled and dated soon after their daughter's birth.^[35] Busson and Thurman have one daughter together, Rosalind Arusha Arkadina Altalune Florence Thurman-Busson, known as Luna (born July 2012 in Boston, MA).^[36] The couple called off the engagement for the second time in April 2014.^[37] In January 2017, Thurman and Busson began a custody battle for their daughter.^[38] Thurman ultimately received primary physical custody later that month.^[39]

In 2012, Busson sold Andy Warhol's portrait Mao (1973) for $12 million at Phillips in New York.^[40]

Waterloo provides a glamorous platform for Ark fundraiser

Friday 14 May 2010 13:20 | 0 comments

It was perhaps the most glamorous and wealthiest set of people ever assembled on a London train platform. Uma Thurman, Queen Rania of Jordan, Naomi Campbell, Eva Herzigova and Sophie Dahl flocked to Waterloo station as the capital's hedge fund kings held their annual fundraising bash last night.

The station's former Eurostar platforms were transformed into an arcadian dream world, where 800 guests — others included Princess Maria-Olympia of Greece and Elisabeth Murdoch — dined on kobe beef and chilled Valrohna chocolate and chilli soup and danced to The Killers. Steve Coogan even reprised Alan Partridge for good measure. After all, it was for charity — the Ark (Absolute Return for Kids) organisation founded by hedge fund godfather Arpad "Arkie" Busson. An auction saw an Oscar weekend go for £250,000, as did an African safari on elephants, while pheasant and partridge shooting in Yorkshire raised £180,000.

Companies backed by billionaire Nick Candy tap taxpayer for more than £2m during coronavirus pandemic

By DAILY MAIL CITY & FINANCE REPORTER

PUBLISHED: 08:54 AEDT 4 January 2021 | UPDATED: 09:39 AEDT 4 January 2021

Companies backed by billionaire Nick Candy have tapped the taxpayer for more than £2m since the pandemic began.

Blippar and Vibe Group, start-up companies which count Candy as a significant investor, have raised cash from the Government's Future Fund.

Sweetener: Blippar and Vibe Group, start-up companies which count Nick Candy as a significant investor, have raised cash from the Government's Future Fund

Blippar, an augmented reality firm, raised £3m in 2020 with half coming from the Government.

Vibe, a ticketing business, bagged £850,000 from the Future Fund, which was designed to help innovative young companies struggling to raise cash from their investors during the pandemic.

The fund was initially supposed to hand out £250m of state cash, but it has escalated to more than £976m.

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Christian_and_Nick_Candy

Nicholas Anthony Christopher Candy (born 23 January 1973)^{[1][2]} and Christian Peter Candy (born 31 July 1974)^[3] are British luxury property developers. The brothers were estimated to share a joint net worth of £1.5 billion in the Estates Gazette rich list 2010, placing them at position 52 in the list of the richest property developers in the United Kingdom.^[4]

Early life and education [edit]

Born in London to a Greek-Cypriot mother and English father, the brothers were educated at Priory Preparatory School and Epsom College^[5] in Surrey. Christian was later studying for a business management degree at King's College London but did not graduate. Nick graduated from University of Reading with a degree in Human Geography.^[6]

Career [edit]

In 1995, they bought their first property, a one-bedroom flat in Redcliffe Square, Earl's Court, London. Using a £6,000 loan from their grandmother, the brothers renovated the £122,000 apartment while living in it. Eighteen months later they sold it for £172,000, making a £50,000 profit.^[7]

In their spare time between 1995 and 1999, the brothers began renovating flats and working their way up the property ladder.^[8] Eventually they were able to give up their day jobs where Nick worked in advertising for J. Walter Thompson and Christian for investment bank Merrill Lynch and established Candy & Candy in 1999, of which Nick is CEO.^[9] Nicholas and Christian, who did collaborate on the prestigious One Hyde Park scheme in London, operate separate independent businesses and have done for a number of years. In June 2018, Candy & Candy was renamed Candy Property in order to reinforce Nick Candy's sole ownership of the business and to align with his wider portfolio of companies.^[10] In 2004, Christian established CPC Group in Guernsey, to specialise in high-end residential developments around the world. Some of their more high-profile developments, however, have been in London.^[11]

In 2016 and 2017 they were involved in high-profile litigation in the High Court in London which put their reputations on the line. Mark Holyoake claimed in the High Court action that the Candy Brothers had used threats against him and his family to extort total repayments of £37m against a £12m loan.^[12] Although they were cleared of extortion, Mr Justice Nugee said in his judgment "the protagonists...have been willing to lie when they consider their commercial interests justify them doing so". Mr Justice Nugee went on to say "he had found none of Mr Holyoake's claims to be true, and that there had been no undue duress, influence, intimidation or unlawful interference with economic interests."^{[13][14]} In June 2018, following another application by Mr. Holyoake, the Court of Appeal rejected Mark Holyoake's bid challenging the high-profile high court ruling in December 2017 (above). Lord Justice David Richards concluded that Mr Holyoake's arguments had "no real prospect of success" meaning Mr Justice Nugee's original decision in 2017 was affirmed.^[15]

Personal life [edit]

Christian married Emily Crompton,^[69] socialite and former nightclub hostess, in a lavish ceremony in 2010. They had twins in 2013, Isabella Monaco Evanthia and Cayman Charles Wolf. They lived between UK and Monaco.^[70]

On 29 September 2012, Nick married the Australian-British actress-musician-TV presenter Holly Valance in Beverly Hills, California, US.^[71] In November 2013, they had their first child in London, a daughter, Luka Violet Toni.^[72] Their second daughter, Nova Skye Coco, was born in September 2017.^[73] On 8 April 2022, Candy and Valance were pictured with former US President Donald Trump and British politician Nigel Farage at Trump's Mar-a-Lago resort, with a tweet by Farage indicating that the group had dinner together.^[74] A report in The Times on 28 May 2022 indicated that Candy is also friends with comedians Jimmy Carr and David Walliams, referring to Candy as "any Olympic level name dropper".^[28]

In December 2021, The Daily Mirror published a photograph revealing that Nick attended a party with the then Conservative London mayoral candidate Shaun Bailey on 14 December 2020, which would have broken coronavirus restrictions at the time.^[75] The publication of the photograph in December 2021, followed reporting by The Times in March 2021, which named Nick as the leader of fundraising for Shaun Bailey's London mayoral campaign.^[76] In June 2020, The Guardian also reported that Candy had donated £100,000 to the Conservative Party in March 2020.^[77]

You might have thought being a close friend of the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge would give you access to the most hallowed establishments.

But in a shocking social setback, Dr Mark Cecil, the Old Harrovian hedge fund millionaire who has entertained William and Kate at his villa in Mustique, has discovered he is persona non grata at White's Club in St James's.

Cecil, 55, who qualified as a doctor at St Thomas' Hospital in London before switching to finance, is a founding partner of Jabre Capital Partners in Geneva.

His wife, Katie, who writes about interiors and food for House & Garden magazine, helped style Pippa Middleton's cult book Celebrate and is a pal of Hugh Grant.

Dr Cecil was proposed for the gentlemen-only club (where David Cameron was a member until 2008) by Viscount Daventry, a Warwickshire stately home owner and weekend neighbour of the Cecils.

He was seconded by Bryan Ferry, the Roxy Music star who has stayed at Cecil's Mustique pad.

So, why was Cecil not welcome? He is believed to have fallen foul of his Harrow contemporary and rival hedge fund boss Crispin Odey, founder of Odey Asset Management, who was briefly married to Rupert Murdoch's daughter, Prudence.

Odey and his second wife, Nichola Pease — dubbed the Posh and Becks of finance — spent £130,000 on a porticoed chicken coop at their Gloucestershire home and are worth £450 million.

'It was thought that Cecil is the sort of chap who would have used the club for tedious networking,' says my man at the bar.

ARK (Absolute Return for Kids), the international children's charity, has announced that it is launching the Clinton-ARK Initiative for Mozambique, through a strategic partnership with the Clinton Foundation HIV/AIDS Initiative (CHAI). The partnership will support the delivery of rapid and high quality care and treatment for HIV/AIDS in Mozambique.

The Clinton-ARK Initiative for Mozambique will provide training and mentoring for health care workers, reaching over 300 clinicians in its first year. The five year partnership will be funded by ARK to a total of USD $8 million. Programmes will be jointly designed and managed by ARK (led by ARK HIV/AIDS Director, Dr Ashraf Grimwood) and CHAI, working with the government of Mozambique.

The strategic partnership was announced at ARK's 6th Annual Gala Dinner in London in a speech by former President Bill Clinton. Attended by 1,200 guests, predominantly from the financial services industry, the event raised an astonishing £26.6 million ($53 million) for the charity, exceeding the £18.5 million raised in 2006. Thanks to sponsorship by Bloomberg, Merrill Lynch, UBS, BlueCrest and two anonymous donors, all the money raised goes directly to support ARK's programmes.

The Dinner also raised funds to support expansion of ARK's other programmes such as City Academies and the Future Leaders programme for future head teachers in the UK, enabling children to leave institutional care in Eastern Europe, and other HIV/AIDS projects in South Africa.

The Gala Dinner was held at the historic Marlborough House on Pall Mall, home of the Commonwealth Secretariat. The auction conducted by Lord Dalmeny, Deputy Chairman of Sotheby's UK, included, amongst other items, dinner with ex-Soviet Union President Mikhail Gorbachev, a day on the set of the new Bond film with Daniel Craig, following the action in the America's Cup with Team Alinghi, and a photograph by Andreas Gursky. The legendary musician, Prince, entertained guests with an amazing performance. The pledge appeal was delivered by Madonna. The style and organisation of the Gala were finessed by the work of event producers, Starlight, Rhubarb Food Design and Rob van Helden Floral Design.

Arpad Busson, ARK's Chairman, said:

"The Clinton-ARK Initiative for Mozambique is a remarkable landmark in ARK's development. In the past three years, ARK's work in South Africa has prevented nearly 30,000 children from being orphaned, and we are now poised to replicate our model in Mozambique. We are honoured to be working with the Clinton Foundation to save the lives of those infected with HIV/AIDS in Africa, helping the Mozambican government increase their medical training programmes to address the significant shortage of qualified personnel, training more than 300 this year alone. We are also rolling out ARV treatment and adherence programmes to both caregivers and children."

Mr Busson further commented:

"ARK's Gala Dinner was a fantastic success in achieving what matters to us most – transforming children's lives. After putting all the money raised at last year's ARK Dinner to work, we now have ambitious plans to expand ARK's work in education, both in the UK and internationally, in providing care for institutionalised children in Bulgaria and elsewhere in Eastern Europe, and HIV/AIDS in Southern Africa."

President Clinton, said:

The ARK model's tremendous success in treating HIV/AIDS in South Africa makes it a natural partner for the Clinton Foundation in Mozambique. Working with ARK, we can provide life saving medicine to children with AIDS, while also training people to diagnose, treat and care for them and follow-up with their treatment."

This partnership tackles the massive needs in Mozambique, where 78% of the population live on less than $2 per day and 1.8 million adults and children are infected with HIV/AIDS – the fourth largest number worldwide. The lack of skilled resources is apparent through the existence of only a little over 500 Mozambican doctors, serving a population of nearly 20 million. This Initiative will train and mentor existing health care workers, as well as increase the numbers able to enter the profession through medical schools, with a particular emphasis on HIV/AIDS.

Hillary Clinton's Link To Ghislaine Maxwell Is Revealed As It's Confirmed She Gave Socialite's Nephew A Job

Hillary Clinton is undoubtedly not very happy right now as reports are coming out about her link to Ghislaine Maxwell, the former madam of the late billionaire pedophile Jeffrey Epstein. OK Magazine reported that Clinton hired Maxwell's nephew, Alexander Djerassi, to work in her office at the State Department when she served as Secretary of State. Djerassi, who is the son of Maxwell's sister Isabel Maxwell, was given a prominent and powerful position in Clinton's office.

On the occasion of the Pearson Annual General Meeting (AGM), on 4 May, EI, together with representatives of the National Education Union (NEU), the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) and the University and College Union (UCU) took our objection regarding Pearson's continuing support of Bridge International Academies directly to the Pearson Board and AGM.

Kenya National Union of Teachers (KNUT) General Secretary Wilson Sossion addressed the AGM, asking why Pearson continues to support and invest in Bridge International Academies (Bridge) when the establishments have been declared illegal by the courts in Nairobi.

Teaching Leaders, www.teachingleaders.org.uk: set up by Ark in 2008 and aimed at selecting, training, and fast-tracking those who will become 'middle leaders' (department heads, for example) in the UK. Run in partnership with the National College, Teach First and Future Leaders, and partly funded by the Department for Education, Teaching Leaders provides a two-year programme of formal training, coaching and support to provide leadership and management skills for teachers seen as becoming the middle leaders of the future. It trains them on three specific fronts: managing pupil data; holding teachers accountable; and motivating their teams. The £9million of funding from the government in July 2011 allowed Teaching Leaders to expand across the UK. Teaching Leaders also envisages an expanded role in teacher training in the future: many of its partner schools have been designated Teaching Schools, providing local hubs for training new teachers and for the professional development of more experienced staff. Besides government and Ark, Teaching Leaders is supported by Pearson, Bloomberg and law firm Linklaters.

At the start of lockdown Marina Cowdray felt, 'topsy-turvy and upside down', and found the amethyst and rose quartz she has dotted around her home in West Sussex particularly helpful during this period. 'They are a part of earth's DNA and also ours, sometimes I put them in my pocket or sit with them and focus,' she tells me, 'I use that concentration as an intention for myself as they are such an emotional stabiliser.' It's a mental thing; our minds believe the chaos so using crystals can give us a sense of freedom to navigate our way out of a fearful mind set.

He is the eldest son and heir of Weetman Pearson, 3rd Viscount Cowdray (1910–1995) [1][2] of Cowdray Park, Sussex and of Dunecht House, Aberdeenshire, by his first wife Lady Anne Pamela Bridgeman (1914–2009), a daughter of Orlando Bridgeman, 5th Earl of Bradford (1873–1957) and a first cousin of Princess Alice, Duchess of Gloucester.[3] His parents separated when he was two years old.[4] His great-grandfather, who founded the family's fortune, was the prominent businessman Weetman Dickinson Pearson, 1st Viscount Cowdray (1856–1927), created Viscount Cowdray in 1917. The 53,000 acres (21,000 ha) paternal estate of Dunecht in Scotland was inherited by his half-brother Charles Anthony Pearson (born 1956).[citation needed]

Under PSL, the government continues to own school infrastructure and to pay public employee teachers' salaries. The Government pays each provider USD$50 per student through teacher salary and maintenance costs (MoE, Dec. 2016, p.42). The service providers operate the schools and provide a matching subsidy of a minimum of USD$50² per student, with a maximum of USD$3,250 designated per grade, or 65 students per grade. Bridge International Academies (BIA) has a different arrangement with the government, which includes a cap of 55 students per grade (Sandefur et al, 2017, p.7)³. There is a minimum payment of USD$12,500 per school given to providers operating smaller schools to ensure these schools are not disadvantaged (MoE, Feb. 2017, p.18). All external service providers can also funnel additional resources into their schools, including by hiring additional teachers, providing additional teaching and learning materials, and building new infrastructure.

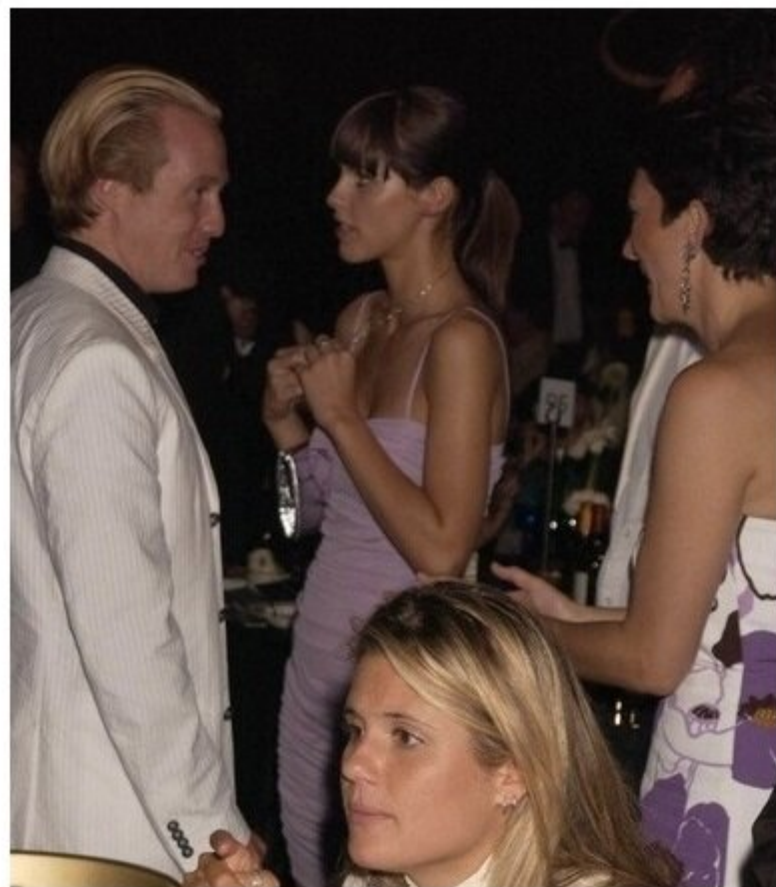

In the current Education Sector Plan (ESP), PSL is allocated USD$ 15 million over three years (MoE, Feb. 2017, p.20). The MoE claims to spend approximately USD$50 per student at government primary schools, with a majority of that going to teacher salaries and maintenance costs.⁴ External funding for PSL has included some prominent corporate and philanthropic donors, including Vitol, UBS, ELMA, Social Finance, and Big Win Philanthropy. PSL is being advised by the UK charity Absolute Return for Kids (ARK).

The Swiss bank is launching a global equity fund that plays to the theme of a fintech industry worth trillions of dollars, and which has been boosted by the structural changes wrought by the pandemic.

Union Bancaire Privée, the Geneva-based private banking group, has launched a global fintech equity fund which taps into the growth of this sector worldwide - an example of thematic investing.

The new offering is called the UBAM - Global Fintech Equity Fund.

The fund is managed by UBP's Swiss & Global Equity team, its co-head Martin Moeller acting as leading portfolio manager. It invests in 20 to 40 stocks offering global exposure across fintech-related themes ranging from global payments to financial IT infrastructure, networks and security, data and analytics, insurance technology and financial platforms.

UBP argues that the fintech space - with a combined market cap of more than $2 trillion - allows for considerable investment opportunity.

https://www.takimag.com/article/madoffs_make_away/

When Thierry Magon de la Villehuchet committed suicide just before Christmas, I hoped against hope that others would do the same. No such luck. Villehuchet was an aristocrat, a gentleman and an honest man. He felt responsible for the loss of $1.4 billion and he took the honourable way out. I did not know Villehuchet but people who did have spoken very highly of him. The rest of Madoff's gang I do know, and they are as likely to do the honourable thing as I am to emigrate to Israel.

Most of these friends of Madoff own chalets in Gstaad, or visit regularly. I have warned personnel at the Gstaad Palace, the Yacht Club and the Eagle Club that if I come across any of them there will be fisticuffs. Not that any of them would fight. People like that rarely do. The reason I'm so angry is that so many good people have been ruined by the greed of a few 'feeder' fund managers and so-called bankers. I will start with one Michael de Picciotto. His uncle, Edgar de Picciotto, is the founder and chairman of Union Bancaire Privée, a Geneva-based bank that invested client money with Madoff. The Picciottos are Syrian-Lebanese Jews who have become extremely rich these past 20 years. Somewhere along the way they picked up the aristocratic 'de', that being the only similarity any Picciotto has had with anything resembling aristocracy. The younger Picciotto invested $700 million with Madoff. Didn't the amazing return on Madoff's fund ring any alarm bells in Picciotto's head? What needs to be done now is for the UBP to cough up the moolah to the clients it took down the Swanee. The bank has the money—at the last count the UBP had 125 billion greenbacks under management—but parting with it is a different story altogether. Angry investors are now seeking to recover a portion of their funds, but what I'd like to know is why only a portion. The Picciottos are now deeply involved in damage control. They have myriad lawyers and PR flacks, and as I write I hear that Edgar Picciotto is planning to come up to Gstaad. Although he is old and very ugly, a punch in the face would do him a world of good.

Michael de Picciotto is Vice-Chairman of the Supervisory Board of Engel & Völkers AG. E&V is one of the world's leading companies specialising in the brokerage of premium residential property and commercial real estate. In March 2016 he entered his current role at Engel & Völkers, of which he is an important shareholder, to support the company's rapid international expansion.

Michael de Picciotto held numerous managerial positions at the family owned Swiss private bank UBP in London and Geneva, of which he remains a shareholder. He has extensive experience in asset management, private banking and trading. For nearly 30 years, he ran several divisions of UBP, including the High Net Worth, Trading and Treasury, the London branch and the Asian chapter.

Michael first joined UBP in 1988 as Managing Director of CBI-UBP International in London, and later headed up the bank's global financial activities, before adding other roles at the bank.

Prior to UBP, Michael de Picciotto had started his professional career at RBC Dominion Securities, the large Canadian investment bank and became co-head of the Capital Markets department, he was based in London and Paris.

His expertise in the industry has given him a well-established reputation as an innovative and experienced banker, with a broad international network of contacts, including Institutional Investors and Ultra High Net Worth families.

Michael studied at the Faculty of Hautes Etudes Commerciales at the University of Lausanne. He grew up in Brussels and splits his time between various locations in Europe.

Outside of his business activities, Michael de Picciotto founded the de Picciotto-Lesser Cancer Cell Observatory in Memory of Wolfgang and Ruth Lesser at the Moross Integrated Cancer Centre. The centre offers specialists and scientists advanced imaging technologies for in-depth analyses of cancer cells. The observatory is named after his maternal grandparents to honour their lives and memory.

STORIES & DISCOVERIES

Created as a key component of the Moross Integrated Cancer Center (MICC), the de Picciotto- Lesser Cancer Cell Observatory in Memory of Wolfgang and Ruth Lesser, established by Michael de Picciotto, offers scientists in-depth analysis of cancer cells using advanced imaging technologies, which enables viewing live cells in action and at high optical resolutions.

Access to these state-of-the-art light microscopy techniques and instruments will allow Weizmann Institute scientists to investigate and analyze cancerous and normal cells in varying experimental modalities and at different scales from single molecules to the whole, functional organism.

"The in-depth analysis offered by the de Picciotto- Lesser Observatory will revolutionize our capacity to image life processes in unprecedented depth, enabling us to monitor specific molecular and cellular changes occurring in the cancer cells, which enable them to invade tissues and organs and grow in a deregulated fashion. Understanding the cellular and molecular hallmarks of cancer cells and gaining insight into the complexity and heterogeneity of cancer can open novel diagnostic and therapeutic avenues," says Prof. Benjamin Geiger, head of the Observatory and a member of the Department of Molecular Cell Biology.

Michael de Picciotto grew up in Brussels and splits his time between London and Switzerland, where he lives with his wife and two daughters. He made his gift for the establishment of the Observatory in memory of his maternal grandparents, who were born and raised in Germany. In 1933, barely 20 years old, they fled Nazi Germany to Amsterdam; their own parents followed after the Kristallnacht in November 1938, when Michael's mother was born. They survived deportation to Bergen Belsen and lived in Amsterdam until moving to Jerusalem in the 1980s. "My grandfather, a successful businessman, was a very generous and charitable person with whom I had an extremely close bond. He was also a great supporter of Israel." Wolfgang Lesser passed away in Jerusalem, in 1995, from pancreatic cancer.

"My contribution to the Cancer Cell Observatory allows me to honor my beloved grandparents, and express my attachment to my roots and my fascination with science," says Michael de Picciotto, whose father is an engineer—as were his two uncles—and who also has a PhD in organic chemistry from Geneva University.

"Science is the dominant field of excellence in Israel, and the Weizmann Institute is one of its most successful 'engines'. Globally, and in particular over the past 100 years, science has greatly benefited from many important Jewish scientists and represents an impressive contribution by our 'nation' to mankind," he continues. "I am eager to follow and observe the future results of the research done within the Observatory and am grateful to be able to associate my grandparents' memory and that of my family with this exciting new area at the Weizmann Institute."

In the August issue: ARK charity party
17 February 2012

An astonishing £4 million was raised for ARK, the charity which transforms the lives of children in need, set up by key players in the hedge fund industry and chaired by Arpad Busson. High fashion and finance (in the shape of Citadel, ABN Amro and Deutsche Bank) collided in the unlikely location of Old Billingsgate Market. Valentino came, flanked by Elizabeth Hurley, to see the fabulous evening dress she has donated being modelled by Elle Macpherson, perfectly downsized since the birth of her second child. A round of golf with Hugh Grant was sold off for £35,000, with the bonus of Elle as caddy. Tatler's Isabella Blow and Nicola Formby sold themselves to act as style counsellors, and a rare bottle of Château Le Mission Haut-Brion fetched a staggering £55,000. Seasoned rockers Brian May and Roger Taylor of Queen performed after dinner together with Bob Geldof.

During the 19th century Billingsgate market, situated in the south-east corner of the City of London, was the largest fish market in the world. Originally just a general market by the riverside a 1699 Act of Parliament made Billingsgate 'a free and open market for all sorts of fish whatsoever'.

In Deutsche Bank Research's Exit Strategy Policy Tracker (12 October) Marion Laboure, Jim Reid, and researcher Krishna Bhimavarapu of Accuity Knowledge Partners reflect on the dashboard data along with DBResearch Data Innovation Group (dbDIG) data, regional responses, and where vaccine developments are leading.

"The global vaccine rollout continues to accelerate with over 6.5 billion doses administered worldwide, of which 402 million are in the US. Despite this, the threat of the Delta variant and new waves in different countries continue to put the economic recovery in jeopardy," they warn. The team also highlight that around 4% of the total vaccine doses administered are booster doses, and how "long-Covid" is, for some sufferers, holding back full recovery from the virus.

The FinCEN Files investigation has revealed that top Deutsche Bank executives knew the bank could be used for money laundering. The news is the latest in a long line of scandals from Germany's largest bank.

It had been quieter than usual at Deutsche Bank lately. No new accusations, no more financial penalties. New management led by Christian Sewing, at the helm since spring 2018, seems to have accomplished what the high-rise banks in Germany's financial capital Frankfurt had long desired: calm, and an urgently needed restructuring program.

Now the quiet days appear to be over. The revelations gleaned from the leaked FinCEN files suggest the bank's top management knew about suspicious transactions amounting to over $1 trillion dollars.

Old Billingsgate London Events

Old Billingsgate London is a grand Victorian-style events venue in the heart of the city, offering three industrial-style function spaces and beautiful views of the River Thames for a truly memorable event.

Once a world-famous fish market, the Victorian Grade II listed building has since been transformed into a magnificent venue for corporate functions, weddings, and social events. The old market floor is now an exquisite Grand Hall which holds varying events from wedding receptions to awards dinners, and the lower-level cold storage space has transitioned into a premier underground haven.

Whether you're looking for somewhere to celebrate as newlyweds, host a conference, or enjoy a summer soiree, Old Billingsgate London provides a sensational backdrop to bring your celebration to life.

Old Billingsgate London is situated on the River Thames in the City of London, conveniently located between London Bridge and Tower Bridge. There are excellent transport links nearby and a car park 250m away.

Highlights of Old Billingsgate London Events:

- Victorian Grade II listed building
- Three unique event spaces, including The Grand Hall, The Vault, The Gallery
- Central city location on the River Thames
- Formerly a world-famous fish market in the 19th century
- Industrial architecture and design with exposed brickwork, arching beams, and a vaulted ceiling

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL.

Deutsche Bank AG tapped a veteran of Barclays PLC and American Express Co. to be its new chief compliance officer and reshuffled other positions as the German lender works to revamp its compliance programs in the wake of several regulatory investigations in recent years over its business conduct and compliance controls.

Laura Padovani will join Deutsche Bank on April 1 as its group chief compliance officer and head of compliance, according to a memo seen by The Wall Street Journal. Ms. Padovani spent seven years at Barclays, most recently as its compliance chief, and 20 years at American Express. She will be part of Deutsche Bank's executive committee and will be based in London with a presence in the Frankfurt office, the announcement said.

Ms. Padovani will succeed Pascal Tagné, who has been compliance chief for the past two years. Mr. Tagné will become the head of compliance for the Asia-Pacific region and will relocate to Singapore, the announcement said. Mr. Tagné, who has spent more than six years at Deutsche Bank, will also take on the role of deputy chief compliance officer, according to the memo.

The current deputy compliance chief, Graham Kent, will lead the business selection and conflicts office, the announcement said.

Ms. Padovani's experience in implementing change and remediating financial-crime risk at a global company as well as her experience in dealing with regulators will help Deutsche Bank's compliance team "in reaching the next level," according to the announcement from Stefan Simon, the bank's chief administrative officer.

The reshuffle comes as Deutsche Bank continues to face scrutiny both in the U.S. and in Germany over its money-laundering controls and its business dealings with Jeffrey Epstein, the disgraced financier who died in jail in 2019 while awaiting trial on federal sex-trafficking charges.

Germany's top financial watchdog, BaFin, in November threatened to fine Deutsche Bank if it didn't implement controls against money laundering by mid-2023. The regulator said Deutsche Bank needed to take specific measures to prevent money laundering and terrorism financing so it could fulfill requests BaFin had made in 2018 and 2019.

Deutsche Bank also was part of a roster of banks that agreed to pay $200 million each in fines in September to settle U.S. regulatory investigations alleging their employees' use of messaging applications such as WhatsApp broke record-keeping rules.

The German lender also is facing a lawsuit in New York from women who accused Epstein of sexual abuse and who said the bank facilitated his alleged sex-trafficking operation and ignored red flags about its wealthy client. A Deutsche Bank spokesman said at the time that the claim lacked merit. Deutsche Bank was fined $150 million in 2020 by the New York Department of Financial Services for failing to properly monitor its dealings with Epstein.

Ark Patronage

Ark would not exist without our Patrons. Every pound of patronage donated allows us to raise five times more in donations through government and third party funding. This has enabled us to leverage £460m from governments and partners in ten years.

Patronage allows Ark to promise donors that 100% of their gift will go directly to our programmes which transform children's lives in the UK and across the world. Three out of four donors consider this essential when making the decision to give. For this reason, our patrons play a crucial role in our funding model and are at the very core of Ark.

PATRONAGE

Patronage includes the following benefits:

- ▶ Events- Invitations to a range of private events to meet fellow Patrons and members of the Ark family, including an annual exclusive Patrons dinner hosted by one of our Trustees. Guest speakers at Ark events have included Boris Johnson, Bill Clinton and the Duke of Cambridge.
- ▶ Recognition- Acknowledgement of your patronage on Ark's main communications channels including our website and annual review. For corporate patrons, we will provide marketing materials so that you can promote your patronage via your website, email and other avenues.
- ▶ Opportunity to get involved- Meetings with Ark staff to find out how your support impacts the lives of children. In addition, you will be invited to join an annual trip to one of our programmes in Africa, Europe or Asia so you can experience first-hand Ark's work. For corporate patrons, members of the Ark team can give informal talks and arrange Skype sessions for your employees with our overseas programme teams about the work your company's patronage supports.
- ▶ Information -Regular updates about our programmes, including our fortnightly Ark Highlights email giving you an insider's view of our activity and progress. You'll also receive reports on the programmes of your interest which outline our progress and impact.

To find out more about becoming an Ark patron, contact Michael.Clark@arkonline.org

PATRONAGE COSTS

- ▶ Annual INDIVIDUAL patronage is £25,000 per year.
- ▶ Annual CORPORATE patronage is £50,000 per year.

BES bank former patriarch gets 6-year jail sentence; lawyer says appeal planned

LISBON, March 7 (Reuters) - The former patriarch of the Espirito Santo family of bankers, Ricardo Salgado, was sentenced to six years in jail by a Lisbon court on Monday for appropriating 10.7 million euros ($11.65 million) from defunct lender Grupo Espirito Santo (GES).

Money-laundering charges [edit]

Financial Times, 25 July 2014:^[19] "For the first time in its history, Banco Espírito Santo, one of Portugal's largest banks, has been placed under independent management with no connection to the banking dynasty that gives the lender its name. The family business empire is in turmoil after its three main companies filed for court protection from creditors. Salgado, who was detained and questioned on Thursday, has been made a formal suspect in a money-laundering investigation. The epitome of Portuguese banking's fondness for sober suits and wood-paneled boardrooms, Salgado has maintained his traditional gravitas through months of intense crisis for the family group. His serious image matches the power and influence that many believe Portugal's best-known banker has wielded for 15 years or more. The media has dubbed him "DDT", the initials for "Dono Disto Tudo", or "Owner of All This", a nickname said to have originated in the Espírito Santo family itself. Salgado was born in 1944 into what was already a wealthy banking dynasty, one of a handful of powerful families that António de Oliveira Salazar, the rightwing dictator, allowed to dominate the Portuguese economy. The Espírito Santos mingled with the Rockefellers and befriended the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. But the family's social origins were more humble, some suggesting that their name – which translates as Holy Ghost – originates from a surname traditionally given to babies left at churches by destitute mothers.

As a 30-year-old junior director, Salgado escaped being imprisoned with several senior family members, who were held for months after the 1974 coup that overthrew the dictatorship. In 1975, the banking sector was nationalised and the Espírito Santos dispersed abroad, Salgado living in Brazil and Switzerland. By 1991, he had established himself as the head of the family, leading its return to Portugal and the reacquisition of its bank through a reprivatisation programme. Although wealthy, Salgado is not known for an ostentatious lifestyle, telling a Portuguese newspaper in May that "my life begins at 8.30am in the bank and ends at 10pm in the bank". He has made a number of high-profile business enemies during his 22 years at the helm of BES, particularly through feuding between the five strands of the Espírito Santo family over leadership successions. But the financial and legal woes now engulfing the group have generated bitter rifts that continue to surface.

Salgado's influence is rapidly waning. According to annual rankings drawn up by the Jornal de Negócios newspaper, Salgado was the third most powerful person in the Portuguese economy last year; this year he is in 48th position.

Portugal closes Novo Banco's access to funding after restructuring - ministry

Sergio Goncalves

Tue, February 14, 2023 at 2:03 AM GMT+11 · 2 min read

LISBON, Feb 13 (Reuters) - The successful completion in December of Novo Banco's restructuring means Portugal's fourth-largest lender will no longer request funds from the country's Resolution Fund or the state, the finance ministry said on Monday.

The European Commission had agreed that the process involving the bank that emerged from the ashes of the collapsed Banco Espirito Santo in 2014 was over, a ministry statement said. "This closes a very important stage for the stabilization of the national financial system, successfully concluding the process that guaranteed the viability of this important bank," it said.

U.S. private equity fund Lone Star acquired 75% of Novo Banco in 2017, with the sale contract stipulating that the Resolution Fund should inject up to 3.89 billion euros ($4.16 billion) to cover losses on the disposal of some toxic assets inherited from the collapsed BES.

The fund ended up injecting less than the maximum amount foreseen by the clause.

The contract also contained a backstop mechanism under which the state could be required to provide extraordinary support to Novo Banco in extreme scenarios.

The finance ministry said that with "the successful completion of the restructuring" the contingent capital mechanism will cease to function and it will no longer be possible to activate the backstop mechanism.

The Bank of Portugal said in a separate statement that the restructuring of Novo Banco "and the contingent capitalization agreement were essential for the bank's survival," preserving its important role in the financing of the economy.

Since Lone Star bought its stake, Novo Banco has focused on de-risking, closing subsidiaries abroad, offloading bad loans and real estate under tough restructuring commitments agreed with Brussels. Its nine-month net profit almost tripled to 428 million euros.

Espirito Santo Faces Money-Laundering Investigations In Several Countries — Sources

Margot Patrick, Patricia Kowsmann and David Enrich were first to report that prosecutors from several countries including the U.S. have expanded their investigation into Banco Espírito Santo SA beyond the alleged fraud and accounting problems and are now looking into whether the bank was involved in money-laundering activities in multiple countries, according to sources.

Dazzling Duchess and husband William make glamorous debut

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge have attended their first official engagement as a married couple.

Husband and wife topped a star-studded guest list on Thursday evening to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the ARK (Absolute Return for Kids) charity.

It was the Duchess' debut public outing as a member of the royal family.

She brought her usual touch of elegance to proceedings in a sparkling £4,000 blush-coloured Jenny Packham gown, which she accessorised with LK Bennett shoes and a clutch bag.

Despite the presence of celebrities including Colin Firth, Jemima Khan, Elizabeth Hurley and Kevin Spacey, all eyes were of course on Kate and William at the black-tie function, tickets for which cost £10,000.

British celebrities have recorded a video thanking the country's health workers for their efforts amid the coronavirus pandemic.

"All across the country people want you to know how incredible you are and how grateful we are," said Oscar-winning actress Olivia Coleman. "You are an amazing army of brave, wonderful people. Thank you."

It comes ahead of a weekly round of applause for health workers on Thursday evening. Other celebrities who appeared in the video include: Gary Barlow, Stephen Fry, Harry Kane, Hugh Grant, Andrew Garfield, Matt Smith, Sir Ben Kingsley, Rachel Weisz, Simon and Yasmin Le Bon, Simon Cowell, Jim Broadbent, Dame Joan Collins, Michael Sheen, Simon Pegg, Thandie Newton, Mark Strong, Billie Eilish, John Terry, David Oyelowo, Tom Hiddleston, Dame Julie Walters and Colin Firth.

Nicola Elizabeth Formby (born 22 April 1965) is a South African journalist, company director and food consultant, and a former model and actress.

Life and career [edit]

Born in South Africa in 1965,^[1] Formby has recalled that while she was growing up there "dogs lived in kennels outside and never ever came into the house with their muddy paws".^[2] She came to England and was educated at Wellington College, Berkshire. In her teens, David Bailey photographed her for a magazine cover and said she reminded him of Julie Christie. This led to modelling work for Clairol and Wella and to TV commercials in Germany.^[3]

From modelling, Formby went on to appear in the Ben Elton comedy The Man from Auntie (1990). She played the leading role of Diana, Princess of Wales, in the three-hour television movie The Women of Windsor (1992), about the lives of Diana and Sarah Ferguson.^{[4][5]} She also appeared in the television series Bugs and The All New Alexei Sayle Show (1995). Moving into journalism, Formby became editor-at-large of Tatler^[6] and is also a food consultant for Pret a Manger and Itsu.^[7]

Personal life [edit]

From 1995 until his death in 2016, Formby was the partner of [A. A. Don't try to change your family, says Mariella Frostrup. Loosen the ties and share ideas and inspiration with like-minded companions

☛ 'The pair of them have turned into rightwing, xenophobic, fake snobs and it truly disgusts me.' Photograph: Justin Tallis/AFP/Getty Images

The dilemma I am 52 years old, divorced, and have two adult children who live and work away. Recently, the relationship I have with my mum and dad has become very strained. They are in their mid-70s and they voted for Brexit, which has been a sticking point ever since. Each time we talk, it ends up about politics. I was embarrassed at my dad's Ukip poster in the window - paradoxically, he had taught me, growing up, to be a socialist, not to be elitist and to treat everyone the same. The pair of them have turned into rightwing, xenophobic, fake snobs and it truly disgusts me.

Coupled with that they are Covid law-breakers - they regularly have extended family inside their house and my mother gets offended that I will only stand on the doorstep wearing a mask to visit her. She declares: "We haven't got the plague, you know." They are comfortably well off and I don't ask for anything from them. My sister has also breached Covid regulations and she works in the NHS and that astounds me. I get texts from my mum and dad and wider family, all telling me that I am a disgrace for avoiding meeting them. I used to have a happy relationship with them, but now I can't bear them because of their views.

Mariella replies That's quite a list of transgressions. It makes the Borgias family look positively functional. That said, at this point, after a challenging 12 months, I daresay there are only a small minority left who haven't made a Covid breach or two. And any day now, the well-off will start sheepishly returning after slipping silently away to the Tropics at the first mention of lockdown. World-class social skills will be required to navigate gatherings when we re-emerge into the world, with many families and friendships put to the test on the basis of how the country's most recent darkest hour was navigated.

Her Norwegian father, who died aged 44 when Frostrup was 15,^[2] was a journalist (including Foreign Editor)^[4] on The Irish Times, and her Scottish mother an artist.^[5] She has four siblings.^[6]

Career [edit]

After the death of her father, in 1977 she moved to London.^[2] There she worked as a public relations executive for Phonogram Records between 1980 and 1990; coordinated the publicity for the Live Aid concert at Wembley in 1985; and, after leaving Phonogram, started television work as a presenter and film critic.

Frostrup presented the Channel 4 music show Big World Cafe in 1989 alongside Eagle Eye Cherry and Jazzie B.

She also presented Thames Television's Video View from 1990 and, after Thames lost the London ITV franchise, reprised the role straight afterwards on The Little Picture Show for Carlton Television from 1993. ^[citation needed]

Frostrup has interviewed many celebrities, writers and artists and has presented a variety of television programmes, including one on travel, and has appeared in other television shows such as the series Have I Got News for You and the sitcom Absolutely Fabulous. She made several guest appearances as herself in the series Coupling, including an episode where one of the characters fantasizes about her, then meets her in person.^[7] She has also appeared in fictionalised form in Michael Paraskos's In Search of Sixpence.^[8]

Patents for COVID-19 vaccines

In April 2021, during the COVID-19 pandemic, Gates was criticized for suggesting that pharmaceutical companies should hold onto patents for COVID-19 vaccines. The criticism came due to the possibility of this preventing poorer nations from obtaining adequate vaccines. Tara Van Ho of the University of Essex stated, "Gates speaks as if all the lives being lost in India are inevitable but eventually the West will help when in reality the US & UK are holding their feet on the neck of developing states by refusing to break [intellectual property rights] protections. It's disgusting."^[137]

Gates is opposed to the TRIPS waiver.^{[138][139][140]} Bloomberg News reported him as saying he argued that Oxford University should not give away the rights to its COVID-19 information, as it had announced, but instead sell it to a single industry partner, as it did.^[141] His views on the value of legal monopolies in medicine have been linked to his views on legal monopolies in software.^{[139][140]}

By BBN Staff: An article published on 'CNBC Make It' reports that Microsoft co-founder and billionaire, Bill Gates, owns a private island in Belize

The article, published yesterday, gave a breakdown of Gates' fortune, which CNBC received from a global high net worth intelligence and data company, called Wealth-X. The company said that of the multi-million dollar properties Gates owns, he has a private island in Belize called Grand Bogue Caye, which is valued at about $25 million.

The island, which is reportedly the largest in the Turneffe Atoll, is located around 24 miles east of Belize City. The entire island spans approximately 400 acres.

Lady Annabel Goldsmith

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Lady Annabel Goldsmith (née Vane-Tempest-Stewart, formerly Birley; born 11 June 1934) is an English socialite and the eponym for a celebrated London nightclub of the late 20th century, Annabel's.^[1] She was first married for two decades to entrepreneur Mark Birley, the creator of Annabel's, which she helped make a glamorous success as her husband's inaugural members-only Mayfair club.

Known in London as a society hostess, during the 1960s and the 1970s, she gained notoriety in gossip columns for her extramarital affair with Anglo-French financier Sir James Goldsmith, who later became her second husband. A descendant and heiress of the Londonderry family, her primary occupation has been as a mother of six children whose births span 25 years. She is also an author and founder of the Democracy Movement, a Eurosceptic political advocacy group. Among her children are the journalist and film producer Jemima Goldsmith (former wife of Imran Khan); and Zac Goldsmith, the former Conservative MP for Richmond Park.

Cavalcades of limos sweeping over the Thames caused a stir as 1,000 people came to Battersea power station to raise funds for the children's charity ARK. Inside the marquee, with its spectacular water-fountain display by Starlight, the top tables were presided over by ARK chairman Arpad Busson, sponsor Bloomberg CEO Lex Fenwick and Tim Hoare. Glowing with winter tans in a sea of hedge-fund honchos were Elle Macpherson, Suzanne Kapoor and Debbie von Bismark. Hugh Grant made it just in time to enjoy the record-breaking auction, which raised more than £11 million, with Jemima. Bidding rocketed to £220,000 for the chance to become the 11th Space Tourist, thanks to Richard Branson. And all the women were disappointed to find that the delicious man-in-a-bath who re-enacted the Levi's 501s as in a fountain was not up for auction.

Princess Marie-Chantal and Prince Pavlos of Greece are celebrated with a dinner at the Standard Hotel in New York.

The typically fashion-heavy crowd at the Standard Grill got a dose of royalty Friday night when Princess Marie-Chantal and Prince Pavlos of Greece took over a long banquet for an intimate dinner hosted in their honor by longtime friends Helen and Tim Schifter. In town for a long weekend before heading to Harbour Island for the holidays, the pair were joined by a dozen or so guests including artist Will Cotton, Adam and Amalia Lindemann, Chiara Clemente, Sotheby's Tobias Meyer, Jacqueline Schnabel and Ghislaine Maxwell. Silver glitter, painted pinecones and vintage wind-up Santa dolls dotted the table and each diner had a giant artisanal candy cane as a place setting.

Wedding of hereditary Prince Ernst August Jr. of Hanover, Germany - 08 Jul 2017

<https://socialprotection-humanrights.org/wp-content/uploads/2017/09/LIBERIA18julyv7.pdf>

In January 2016, the Liberian Ministry of Education (MoE) announced that in the 2016-2017 academic year, it would be turning over management of 50 primary schools to the historically low-fee, for-profit international school provider Bridge International Academies (BIA), known for its "school in a box" model. The announcement was met with extensive national and international criticism, including from the United Nations Special Rapporteur to the Right to Education, Dr. Kishore Singh, who called the move a violation of "Liberia's legal and moral obligations," and a "gross violation of the right to education" (UHCR, March 2016). In response, the MoE opened up the program to other service providers, and initiated an official three-year pilot. Known as the Partnership Schools for Liberia (PSL) pilot, this program officially launched in September 2016, with eight for-profit and non-profit providers: Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (BRAC), Bridge International Academies (BIA), Liberia Youth Network (LIYONET), More than Me, Omega, Rising Academies, Stella Maris, and Street Child (see Appendix 1). These eight providers are currently operating in 94¹ early childhood and primary schools, which together enrol approximately 27,000 students. In the current Education Sector Plan (ESP), PSL is allocated USD$ 15 million over three years (MoE, Feb. 2017, p.20). The MoE claims to spend approximately USD$50 per student at government primary schools, with a majority of that going to teacher salaries and maintenance costs.⁴ External funding for PSL has included some prominent corporate and philanthropic donors, including Vitol, UBS, ELMA, Social Finance, and Big Win Philanthropy. PSL is being advised by the UK charity Absolute Return for Kids (ARK).

Marriage and issue [edit]

In the summer of 2016 Ernst August became engaged to Ekaterina Igorievna Malysheva (b. 30 July 1986, Apatity, Russia), a Russian designer, general manager of Audiotube and founder of EKAT, and daughter of Igor Malyshev and Svetlana Malysheva.^{[13][14]} Days before the wedding, the elder Ernst August publicly stated concerns about potential adverse impacts on family assets if the younger Ernst August were to marry his chosen fiancée.^[15] Despite the dynastic tradition of obtaining the head of House Hanover's express, prior authorization for an heir's marriage in accordance with an 1836 Hanoverian house law (as Ernst August's father had done when marrying his sons' future mother in 1981),^[16] the bridegroom's father declared his intention to withhold consent for his son's marriage to Ekaterina Malysheva,^[15] reportedly in a dispute over family assets.^[17]

Nonetheless, the civil marriage took place on 6 July 2017 in Hanover's New Town Hall and was conducted by the mayor of Hanover, Stefan Schostok. The church marriage took place on 8 July 2017 in the Hanover Market Church at which the former Landesbischof of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church of Hanover, Horst Hirschler, presided. The bride was escorted by her father, Igor Malyshev. Her wedding dress was the work of Lebanese designer Sandra Mansour, and she wore a tiara that belonged to the former Kaiser Wilhelm II's only daughter, Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia.^{[18][19]}

Among the wedding guests were: Prince Christian of Hanover, Princess Alexandra of Hanover, Andrea Casiraghi, Tatiana Santo Domingo, Pierre Casiraghi, Beatrice Borromeo, Charlotte Casiraghi, Georg Friedrich, Prince of Prussia and his wife Princess Sophie, Crown Prince Pavlos of Greece and his wife Crown Princess Marie-Chantal, Hereditary Prince Hubertus of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Alexander, Prince of Schaumburg-Lippe and Princess Elisabeth von Thurn und Taxis.^[20] The father of the groom, Prince Ernst August, did not attend the wedding.^[21] From the church, the royal couple rode in a horse carriage to Herrenhausen Gardens for the wedding reception in the Gallery Building. In the evening, a ball took place at Marienburg Castle.

The couple has two daughters and one son:

- Princess Elisabeth Tatiana Maximiliana Iacobella Faiza (born 22 February 2018)^[22]
- Prince Welf August Johannes Ferdinand Karl Wilhelm Anthony Julio Mario (born 14 March 2019)^[23]
- Princess Eleanora Dina Daniela Alexandra (born 26 July 2021)^[24]

Robert Hanson (financier)

The Hon. Robert William Hanson (born 3 October 1960) is a British financier and business man. He is chairman of Hanson Family Holdings, a private company which owns businesses in the fields of logistics, investment banking, news media, and chemicals.

Early life [edit]

Hanson is the elder son of James Hanson, by his marriage in 1959 to Geraldine Kaelin, an American. He had a younger brother, Brook Hanson (1964–2014).^[citation needed]

Educated at Eton and St Peter's College, Oxford, Hanson's first job was as an assistant keeper of reptiles at the Windsor Safari Park.^[1]

Career [edit]

In the 1980s, Hanson joined N M Rothschild & Sons, then went to work for his father,^[citation needed] who was created a life peer in 1983.

At the end of 1997 Hanson resigned from his father's public company, when it was broken up, to become chairman of Hanson Transport Group. In 1998 he founded Hanson Capital, a group of financial services companies aiming to capitalise on his worldwide network of relationships with major investors. This continues as part of the present group of companies.^[1]

Hanson is now the chairman of Hanson Family Holdings, a private company which owns a wide range of businesses in logistics, investment banking and chemicals around the world.^[1]

In 2013, Hanson used Hanson Family Holdings to buy Venezuela's best-selling newspaper, Últimas Noticias, for a figure reported as $US98 million. In 2014, he was accused by newspaper staff of turning it into "a Socialist Party mouthpiece", but the editor, Héctor Dávila, replied that his only instructions from Hanson were "to run a balanced and profitable newspaper".^[2]

Personal life [edit]

Once linked with Sophie Anderton, Tara Palmer-Tomkinson,^[2] and a string of models, Hanson's name appeared in many gossip columns.^[1]

He eventually married the Russian model Masha Markova, at the time half his age, and moved to Los Angeles. The engagement was reported in March 2010 as coming as a shock to London society,^[3] and their son Max was born in October.^[1]

James Edward, Baron Hanson (20 January 1922 – 1 November 2004) was an English Conservative industrialist who built his businesses through the process of leveraged buyouts through Hanson plc.

Career [edit]

Educated at Elland Grammar School near Halifax and at the short-lived Maiden Erlegh House School at Earley, formerly the home of Solly Joel, James Hanson served as a staff officer with 7th Battalion, the Duke of Wellington's Regiment before going into the family transport business.^[2] Lord Hanson and Gordon White (later Lord White of Hull) formed a partnership in the 1960s, and began a greetings card business.^[3] The two men also began buying other companies, in such diverse industries as fertilisers and bricks, which all sat under the umbrella of a listed entity called Hanson Trust (later renamed simply Hanson). By the 1980s, the Hanson Trust operated in both Europe and North America, purchasing under-managed businesses in sectors such as batteries, locks and safes.^[4] He was knighted in 1976^[5] and created Baron Hanson, of Edgerton in the County of West Yorkshire, a life peerage, on 30 June 1983.^{[4][6]}

Hanson's greatest deal was the 1986 purchase of Imperial Group, a British tobacco conglomerate with a diversified portfolio of brand leaders in tobacco, brewing and food, and with a cash rich pension fund, that was his real target. Hanson's team turned up in Bristol the morning of the takeover to find the Pension Trustees had closed the Fund the evening before, denying him the asset.^[7] Lord Hanson had expected to use the Pension Fund as consideration for the transaction. However, it was funded entirely by selling many of Imperial Group's subsidiaries, leaving him with a business that made an operating-profit margin of nearly 50%.

Hanson developed a track record as a corporate raider, which ultimately worked against him in a failed bid for ICI Group, a chemical group, in 1991 which was at the time the UK's third-largest company.^[7] ICI, led by its chairman Sir Denys Henderson hired Goldman Sachs to look into Lord Hanson's business dealings, and they found that Lord Hanson's partner, White, was running racehorses at shareholders' expense.^[3] Lord Hanson had purchased 2.8% of the firm, but backed away from the takeover.^[3]

The chief characteristic of a Hanson company was that of a short-term cash-generating machine, involving large scale redundancies, and the slashing of research and development to the bone - all the hallmarks of an asset stripping operation.^[3]

Hanson was well known for his support of ex-Conservative MP Neil Hamilton, who became famous for his involvement in the "cash-for-questions affair" in the mid-1990s.^[8] He was also an active "Euro-sceptic", opposed as he was to Britain joining the Euro zone, and was a founding member of Business for Britain, an anti-EU organisation. He was also a member of the Bruges Group, which advocates a substantial renegotiation of Britain's relationship with the EU, or if that is not possible, total withdrawal from the EU.^[8]

His billion-dollar empire earned Hanson the nickname "Lord Moneybags".^[9]

Personal life [edit]

Hanson dated Jean Simmons and Joan Collins and was engaged to Audrey Hepburn for almost a year, until she called off the marriage.^[4]

In 1959 Hanson married Geraldine, née Kaelin, an American divorcée. He became stepfather to her daughter, and the couple had two sons of their own, Robert (born 1960) and Brook (1964–2014).^[citation needed]

Nicholas Ponsonby Haslam (born 27 September 1939) is an English interior designer and socialite, and founder of the London-based interior design firm, NH Studio Ltd.

Early life and education

Haslam was born at Great Hurdridge Manor, Amersham, Buckinghamshire, the third son of diplomat William Heywood Haslam (1889–1981)^[1] and his wife, Diamond Louise Constance nee Ponsonby, known as Diana, who was a granddaughter of the 7th Earl of Bessborough, a goddaughter of Queen Victoria, and the former wife of Dr. Henry E. Marks, an American physician.^{[2][3][4]} Haslam's brothers are Ralph Michael Haslam (born 1931) and William John Heywood Haslam (born 1933). He also had a half-sister, Diana Marks, known as Anne (1925–1987), who in 1949 married John Hilder Loeb, son of a founding partner of the Brillo Manufacturing Corporation.^[5]

Haslam was educated at a private school, and then at Eton College.

Career

In 1966, Haslam and his lover at the time, American banking heir James Davison, bought Black Canyon Ranch, near Phoenix, Arizona, for breeding and showing Arabian horses.^[6] From 1970, he combined breeding show horses, working in Los Angeles as a photographer and designing rooms and parties for clients such as Natalie Wood.

Haslam broke up with Davison, and in 1972 returned to London, where he was soon asked to design and decorate a townhouse for Alexander Hesketh. In the early 1980s, Haslam owned and operated the Nicholas Haslam Showroom on Holbein Place, London, together with his then-partner, Paolo Moschino. When the pair split in 1995, Haslam took control of NH Design as the interior design side of the business, with Moschino taking ownership of the Nicholas Haslam shop. The two businesses today operate separately.

In 2002, Haslam published a book of his work, Sheer Opulence. His autobiography, Redeeming Features, was published in 2009; in it, he mentions his affairs with numerous individuals, including architect Philip Johnson and photographer Antony Armstrong-Jones (who later married Princess Margaret). He is a frequent columnist for The London Evening Standard and The Sunday Telegraph magazines.

Besides frequently writing reviews for The World of Interiors and The Spectator, Haslam wrote a gossip column for Ritz Newspaper under the pseudonym Paul Parsons, and has been a contributing editor of British Vogue and Tatler for many years. In December 2010, Haslam started blogging for The Telegraph.

Before launching her own retail chain, the designer Cath Kidston worked for Haslam.

In 2005, he was reported to be a supporter of the Conservative Party.^[7]

In 2011, Haslam designed a set for the play As I Like It by Amanda Eliasch, and also worked on her house in Cheyne Walk.^[8]

In March 2013, Haslam published a book entitled Nicky Haslam's Folly de Grandeur: Romance and revival in an English country house, which reveals the history and design behind his own home.

In September 2013, with Annabel Astor's furniture company OKA, Haslam launched a collection inspired by Gothick-influenced furniture and accessories from his own house.^[9]

Early life and education [edit]

Hicks was born in 1967^{[2][3]} in London.^[4] Hicks is the third child of Lady Pamela Mountbatten and David Nightingale Hicks. Her mother was a lady-in-waiting to Queen Elizabeth II and her father was a famous interior designer.^[5] She is the granddaughter of the Earl and Countess Mountbatten of Burma and the second cousin and goddaughter of Charles III.^{[3][6]}

Hicks grew up in Oxfordshire, England.^[7] She spent holidays at the family estate in Ireland and at her father's self-designed and built Bahamian-holiday home.^[6] As a child, she was a tomboy who kept her distance from royal affairs.^[8] Hicks was exposed to design at an early age through her father and brother, who were both architects.^[5] The 11-year-old Hicks was on holiday in Ireland in 1979 when her grandfather was killed by a bomb planted on his boat.^{[9][10]} In 1981, she served as bridesmaid to Lady Diana Spencer at her wedding to Prince Charles.^[8]

Hicks went to boarding school in Scotland at Gordonstoun, from which she was expelled for having boys in her room.^[3] She then backpacked across India.^[3] Hicks moved to Boston, Massachusetts at age 18 to study photography^{[11][12][13]} at the New England School of Photography,^[14] where she graduated in 1990.

ARK beats £10m target at annual fundraiser by £5.6m

A total of £15.6m was raised at the eighth annual Absolute Return for Kids (ARK) dinner, beating its £10m target but well below last year's figure of £25.5m.

More than 800 guests pledged their support for the event, held at Waterloo International in London, bidding for luxury lots such as Damien Hirst customised Fiat cars and access to the Ferrari Formula One paddock at the Monaco Grand Prix, which went under the hammer of Henry Wyndham, chairman of Sotheby's Europe.

Entertainment was provided by the English Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Simon Wright, and by pupils from ARK academies.

London Mayor Boris Johnson endorsed ARK's work in educating London's least privileged schoolchildren in his keynote speech saying, "Education is the bedrock for extending opportunity," urging ARK "to do more of it faster!"

Arpad Busson, chairman of ARK, announced a £27m HIV/AIDS programme in South Africa that will target HIV in infants. ARK launched its first programme in South Africa, to prevent children being orphaned by AIDS, with the South African government in 2003. They hope to treat another 58,000 patients in the next phase and pilot new drugs that could reduce HIV transmission between mothers and children.

Busson said, "ARK's work has never been more important than it is today."

Since 2002 ARK has invested more than £115m in HIV/AIDS clinics in South Africa, inner city schools in the UK, and re-housing abandoned Romanian children.

Currently self-isolating with his wife in their Cape Town home, Jordan said that isolation was "quite reminiscent of going around the world - that was 13-14 months hardly getting off the boat at all." Between stopping off at destinations including French Polynesia, the Galapagos Islands and Indonesia, Jordan explained that there were long stretches of confinement on board. "I always thought when I was getting on the boat at Southampton in 2012, 'my God I'm going to be bored to death, what an earth am I going to do?' [...] but the time just flew by", said Jordan.

For now, Jordan is planning to fill his time with "a bit of writing" and "for that little moment of fantasy and getting away from it all" plans to "dive into BOAT International".

Jordan also talked at length about how impressed he was by the amazing efforts of National Health Service (NHS) staff in the UK. "I feel so sorry for the people who are affected and I feel sorry for the NHS and all the people who are really the unsung heroes", he said.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Jemma Madeleine Wellesley, Countess of Mornington (née Kidd; born 20 September 1974), is a British make up artist, fashion model, and aristocrat.

She currently resides on the Stratfield Saye estate, Hampshire.

Biography [\[edit\]](#)

Early life [\[edit\]](#)

Lady Mornington is the elder daughter of Johnny Kidd, businessman and former showjumping champion.^{[1][2]} and Wendy Madeline Hodge Kidd. Wendy Kidd is the daughter of Sir John Rowland Hodge, 2nd Baronet,^[3] and founder of the Holder's Festival. Mornington is also a paternal granddaughter of Janet Gladys Aitken and great-granddaughter of Lord Beaverbrook, who founded The Daily Express. Her younger sister is former model Jodie Kidd.^[citation needed]

Career [\[edit\]](#)

Lady Mornington was a fashion model before becoming a make-up artist.^[when?] In 2003, she opened her own "Make-up School" in London.

She was a director of the Jemma Kidd Make-up Limited, which was incorporated in 2005, Ghislaine Maxwell was also a director.^[4] The company launched a cosmetics range in 2006, which was available in the UK (in Boots), America, Australia, Hong Kong, and Canada.

Her book Jemma Kidd Make-up Masterclass was published in 2009.^[citation needed]

Jemma Kidd Make-up went into administration in October 2012.^[5] It was dissolved in January 2020.^[4]

Personal life [\[edit\]](#)

The wedding of Jemma Kidd with Arthur Wellesley, Earl of Mornington, took place at St James Church in Holetown, Barbados, on 4 June 2005.

The couple has twins and a younger son:^[6]

- Lady Mae Madeleine Wellesley (born 4 January 2010 at Chelsea and Westminster Hospital in London)
- (Arthur) Darcy Wellesley, Lord Wellesley (born 4 January 2010)
- The Honourable Alfred Wellesley (born 10 December 2014)

Lady Mornington is separated from Lord Mornington, the heir apparent of the 9th Duke of Wellington. The couple announced their separation in August 2020.^[citation needed]

British celebrities have recorded a video thanking the country's health workers for their efforts amid the coronavirus pandemic.
"All across the country people want you to know how incredible you are and how grateful we are," said Oscar-winning actress Olivia Coleman. "You are an amazing army of brave, wonderful people. Thank you."
It comes ahead of a weekly round of applause for health workers on Thursday evening.
Other celebrities who appeared in the video include: Gary Barlow, Stephen Fry, Harry Kane, Hugh Grant, Andrew Garfield, Matt Smith, Sir Ben Kingsley, Rachel Weisz, Simon and Yasmin Le Bon, Simon Cowell, Jim Broadbent, Dame Joan Collins, Michael Sheen, Simon Pegg, Thandie Newton, Mark Strong, Billie Eilish, John Terry, David Oyelowo, Tom Hiddleston, Dame Julie Walters and Colin Firth.

Duran Duran's Simon Le Bon looks unrecognisable on holiday in Italy with wife Yasmin

Simon Le Bon - of 80s group Duran Duran - looked completely different as he headed shopping with his wife Yasmin Le Bon whilst on holiday in Portofino, Italy

Speaking on Billboard's Pop Shop Podcast, he said: "I knew it was a long time. And obviously the big reason it took such a long time was the emergence of COVID-19. A global pandemic and the ensuing lockdown.

"And how that affected, not just our working schedules, but also life in general, and one's ability to have... really, have music that could make any kind of an impact.

"We thoroughly intended to get this record out in 2020, but everything suddenly shut down. And then we thought, hang on, let's not rush this. We don't know what's going to happen.

"And it would be very easy for the album to go out there and become completely overlooked or just disappear in comparison with the other things that are happening in the world. So we thought, we'll just hang on for a minute."

Simon John Charles Le Bon (born 27 October 1958) is a British singer. He is best known as the lead vocalist and lyricist of the new wave band Duran Duran and its offshoot Arcadia. Le Bon has received three Ivor Novello Awards from the British Academy of Songwriters, Composers and Authors, including the award for Outstanding Contribution to British Music.

Early life [edit]

Le Bon was born on 27 October 1958, on his father's birthday, in Bushey Maternity Hospital in Bushey, Hertfordshire, the first of three boys for Ann-Marie Le Bon, followed by his younger brothers, David and Jonathan (b. 1965). His mother encouraged his artistic talent when he was six years old by entering him in a screen test for a Persil washing powder TV advert, which proved successful. ^[1] He was a member of the local church choir from a young age, and was trained as an actor.

Lord Levy in support of the false pandemic

<https://www.thejc.com/news/uk/jewish-care-boss-demands-substantial-sophisticated-and-regu>

He said: "Jewish Care recognises that these people are the most important in society right now. If nothing else comes of this global pandemic it will be that there is recognition that organisations like ours and thousands of others are valued much more than they were before."

Meanwhile Mr Carmel-Brown praised the fantastic generosity of those within the community who had contributed towards the £4million raised on behalf of a joint appeal launched by Jewish Care, Nightingale Hammerson and The Fed in Manchester, in association with the National Association of Jewish Homes (NAJH), to raise funds to help the charities the fight against coronavirus.

He praised the work of Lord Levy, who had led the fund-raising effort with "one or two others". Mr Carmel-Brown said Jewish Care alone had estimated that they would need an extra £5 million "in addition to what we would normally spend" to help tackle coronavirus "in the first three to four months of the crisis." Having spoken to other homes around the country in the Jewish sector, he said the extra funds had meant there were not concerns about paying for extra PPE for staff and residents and neither was there a problem with paying wages.

David Armstrong-Jones, 2nd Earl of Snowdon

David Albert Charles Armstrong-Jones, 2nd Earl of Snowdon (born 3 November 1961), styled as Viscount Linley until 2017 and known professionally as David Linley, is an English furniture maker, a former chairman of the auction house Christie's UK,^[1] and with his sister, Lady Sarah Chatto, maternal first cousin of King Charles III. He is the only son of Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones, 1st Earl of Snowdon, and a grandson of King George VI. When he was born, he was fifth in the line of succession to the British throne; as of September 2022, he is 24th, and the first person who is not a descendant of Elizabeth II.^[2]

Early life and education [edit]

David Albert Charles Armstrong-Jones was born on 3 November 1961, in Clarence House, London, the son of Princess Margaret and Antony Armstrong-Jones, 1st Earl of Snowdon. He was baptised on 19 December 1961 in the Music Room at Buckingham Palace.^{[3][4][5]} His godparents were his aunt Queen Elizabeth II, Lady Elizabeth Cavendish, Patrick Plunket, 7th Baron Plunket, Lord Rupert Nevill, and Simon Phipps.^[3]

At the age of five, Snowdon began lessons in the Buckingham Palace schoolroom with his cousin Prince Andrew.^[6] He went to several independent schools: first, to Gibbs Pre-Preparatory School in Kensington in London, now known as Collingham College.^[7] Followed by the pre-preparatory section of Ashdown House School, East Sussex, then on to Millbrook House School, near Abingdon, in Oxfordshire,^[8] and finally to Bedales School, where he developed a passion for arts and crafts. From 1980 to 1982 he studied at Parnham House in the small town of Beaminster in Dorset, for craftsmen in wood.^[9]

Snowdon has one full sister, Lady Sarah Chatto (née Armstrong-Jones), and two paternal half-sisters, Lady Frances von Hofmannsthal (née Armstrong-Jones) and Polly Fry.^[10] Snowdon also has a half-brother, Jasper Cable-Alexander, son of his father and Melanie Cable-Alexander, an editor at Country Life magazine.

Covid-19 restrictions have speeded up the auction world's move online, and brought the first cryptocurrency transactions and NFTs – Christie's sold Beeple's digital opus Everydays: The First 5000 Days for a record-breaking US$69 million on March 11. "The swiftness [with which] technology has responded to our needs during the pandemic has been extraordinary," says the son of the late Princess Margaret. "I think we have adapted very quickly as humans to the mechanisation of how we merchandise, advertise and sell." The auction world is a rarefied and glamorous one, handling fine art, jewellery and watches, and connecting with a clientele who expects the very finest service. This service might include David Linley, the Earl of Snowdon, son of the late Princess Margaret and honorary chairman of EMERI (Europe, Middle East, Russia, India) for Christie's, jumping on a plane at a moment's notice to visit a collector who is considering a bid for a painting or piece of fine art. When hammer prices can be millions of dollars, clients like to feel special.

The pandemic, however, has halted this personalised approach, much to Linley's frustration. He acknowledges he's always on the go; "I don't sleep much, and do emails in the middle of the night, wake up and do some more, and so timing has been changed by the immediacy of communication," he says, admitting, "I have no personal time without feeling there is something [his mobile] whirring in my pocket."

Arabella Pollen (born 22 June 1961)^[1] is an English fashion designer and, as Bella Pollen, journalist and author of five novels published between 1997 and 2011.

Early life [edit]

Arabella Rosalind Hungerford Pollen, known as Bella Pollen, is the daughter of Peregrine Michael Hungerford Pollen, a former chairman of Sotheby Parke-Bernet auction house,^[2] and Patricia Helen Barry.^[3] Born in Oxford, she was raised in Manhattan.^[4]

Fashion career [edit]

In 1981, Pollen founded the eponymous design company Arabella Pollen, described by The Independent as: "designer of crisp, colourful clothes for the young social set".^{[3][5]} Among her private clients were Diana, Princess of Wales, Margaux Hemingway and Marianne Faithfull.^[6] Between 1981 and 1994, the company was nominated for eleven major fashion awards.^[which?]

In 1984, Arabella Pollen won the contract to design staff uniforms for the newly launched Virgin Atlantic Airways and created suits in the 'Virgin Red' that is still the airline's signature colour.^{[7][8]} In 1990, Courtaulds acquired a minority share in the company, later increasing this to a majority stake. Arabella Pollen closed in 1994, following Courtaulds' withdrawal.^{[3][5]} Pollen continued to advise the textile giant as a design consultant.^[9]

Writing career [edit]

In 1995, Pollen became a writer, working as Bella Pollen.^[3] Her third book, Hunting Unicorns, became a best seller in 2004.^[10] Midnight Cactus (2007) was sold to Paramount Pictures. Summer of the Bear (2011) was an Oprah summer pick and a Richard and Judy best summer read.^{[10][11]} Pollen has contributed to numerous magazines and newspapers including The Times, The Daily Telegraph, The Spectator, The Observer and Vogue.^{[12][citation needed]}

Personal life [edit]

Pollen's first marriage was to art dealer Giacomo Dante Algranti in 1985, with whom she had two children, Jesse and Samuel.^[13] In 1995, she married David Macmillan, the grandson of former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, and director of the book publisher, Macmillan Publishers.^{[13][14]} The couple have two children, Finn and Mabel.^[13]

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Maurice_Macmillan

Maurice Macmillan

Maurice Victor Macmillan, Viscount Macmillan of Ovenden (27 January 1921 – 10 March 1984), was a British Conservative Party politician and Member of Parliament. He was the only son of Harold Macmillan, 1st Earl of Stockton, who was Prime Minister of the United Kingdom from 1957 to 1963.

Background and education [edit]

Macmillan was the only son of Harold Macmillan, 1st Earl of Stockton, and Lady Dorothy Cavendish, daughter of Victor Cavendish, 9th Duke of Devonshire. He was educated at Eton and Balliol College, Oxford. He served with the Sussex Yeomanry in Europe in the Second World War. Like his father, he was chairman of Macmillan Publishers, as well as a director of two news agencies.

Political career [edit]

Macmillan contested Seaham at the 1945 election, Lincoln in 1951 and Wakefield at a 1954 by-election. He served on Kensington Borough Council from 1949 to 1953, then was elected MP for Halifax at the 1955 general election but lost this seat in 1964. He was then elected for Farnham in 1966. This latter seat became South West Surrey at the 1983 election. He served as Economic Secretary to the Treasury (1963–64) under Alec Douglas-Home, and as Chief Secretary to the Treasury (1970–72), Secretary of State for Employment (1972–73) and Paymaster General (1973–74) under Edward Heath. He was made a Privy Counsellor in 1972.

Family [edit]

Macmillan married the Honourable Katharine Ormsby-Gore, daughter of William Ormsby-Gore, 4th Baron Harlech, on 22 August 1942. They had four sons and a daughter:

- Alexander Daniel Alan Macmillan, 2nd Earl of Stockton (born 10 October 1943)
- Hon. Joshua Edward Andrew Macmillan (1945–1965)
- Hon. Adam Julian Robert Macmillan (1948–2016)^[1]
- Hon. Rachel Mary Georgia Macmillan (1955–1987)^[2]

Life-changing moments can happen at any time and anywhere - not just in the extreme world. But life-changing moments can also happen more gradually and, as we've seen with the current pandemic, it can be no less of a shock when the realization comes. Accepting this and taking responsibility increases your ability to tolerate hardship and to restart your perseverance engine. This is the key to your survival mindset and one of the greatest skills to develop in life.

In How to Survive a Pandemic, acclaimed author and the UK Military's Chief Survival Instructor, John Hudson provides the key elements needed for us to cope with a pandemic - how to prepare rather than panic. From understanding that mindset is key and staying informed and make the right decisions, to practical advice on how to know your enemy, and defend your vulnerabilities, this free eBook is the perfect guide for coping with the COVID-19 pandemic we are currently facing, and how to come out of self-isolation stronger and wiser.

This is a free eBook and will appear as an appendix to How to Survive: Lessons for Everyday Life from the Extreme World, published in paperback in May, 2020.

Elle Macpherson has joined the millions of parents trying to find unique ways to celebrate their children's graduation amid COVID-19.

On Tuesday, the 56-year-old Australian supermodel showed off the incredible graduation cake she bought for her 22-year-old son Flynn Busson's graduation from Boston University.

Elle had the cake made for her son and his friend Madison Soffer, who was graduating from a different school.

Naomi Campbell: I handed 'blood diamonds' to Mandela charity

Naomi Campbell, the model, told a war crimes tribunal that she gave alleged "blood diamonds" to the head of Nelson Mandela's children's charity.

Bruno Waterfield, in The Hague, Aislinn Laing and Caroline Gammell

9:00PM BST 05 Aug 2010

Giving evidence at The Hague, Campbell admitted that she was given a few "dirty-looking pebbles", which are alleged to be blood diamonds from the Liberian warlord following a charity gala hosted by Mr Mandela in 1997.

Campbell, who is so close to Mr Mandela she refers to him as her "honorary grandfather", then claimed that she had given the uncut gems to Mr Mandela's children's charity "to do something good".

The admission draws Mr Mandela, one of the world's most revered statesmen, into the centre of allegations surrounding the funding of the 1991 – 2002 Sierra Leone war, which was characterised by the use of boy soldiers and the mutilation of 20,000 people who lost arms, legs, lips and ears under machete attack.

Mr Taylor, 62, is being tried on 11 counts of war crimes in Liberia's neighbouring Sierra Leone, including charges of murder, rape and sexual slavery. He is accused of trading in "blood diamonds" to fund the brutal and bloody war in which more than 120,000 died.

Mandela has a credible claim to being one of the 20thC's most historically important politicians and statesmen. Since his retirement in 1999 he has, among other things, been prepared to provide support and, where necessary leadership, in the courts of the international mega-event organisers, for South Africa's bids for the 2006 World Cup and the 2008 Olympics.

At St Pauls Theological Centre (SPTC), our vision is to see theology at the heat of the church enabling people to grow in their knowledge and understanding of God as they follow Jesus Christ, empowered by the Holy Spirit

The journey of SPTC is one of partnership. We formed in 2005 as part of Holy Trinity Brompton's (HTB) family of ministries, which includes Alpha. In 2007 SPTC joined with other partners to form St Mellitus College, which has become the fastest-growing theological college in the Church of England, enabling people to train and study on accredited courses while working in the local church.

Lord McAlpine of West Green

Lord McAlpine of West Green is deceased. His full title was The Lord McAlpine of West Green. His name was Robert Alistair McAlpine.

pressgazette.co.uk/lord-mcalpine-accuses-media-defamation-innuendo-over-child-abuse-links/

Former Tory treasurer Lord McAlpine has accused the broadcast and print media of defaming him by innuendo over allegations linking him to child abuse.

After days of frenzied speculation, the peer released a statement vehemently denying that he abused Steve Messham or any other residents of a children's home in Wrexham, North Wales.

Lord McAlpine said the allegations were "wholly false and seriously defamatory".

He said he had visited Wrexham "only once" and that was in the company of an agent from Conservative Central Office.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Robert Alistair McAlpine, Baron McAlpine of West Green^[1] (14 May 1942 – 17 January 2014) was a British businessman, politician and author who was an advisor to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.^[2]

McAlpine was descended from the McAlpine baronets who made their fortune in the construction industry. McAlpine held a variety of jobs before becoming prominent in British politics in the 1980s as the treasurer and a major fundraiser of the Conservative Party. A close ally of Thatcher, McAlpine did not support her successor as Prime Minister John Major, and later joined James Goldsmith's Referendum Party. McAlpine later rejoined the Conservatives but resigned his seat in the House of Lords.

Outside politics McAlpine was prominent in a variety of business developments in Australia as well as being an art collector and memoirist.

Early life and business career [edit]

McAlpine was born at The Dorchester in Mayfair, London.^[3] His great-grandfather was "Concrete Bob", Robert McAlpine,^[2] the first of the McAlpine baronets and the founder of the McAlpine construction firm. He was the second son of Ella Mary Gardner (Garnett) and Edwin McAlpine, the fifth Baronet, and the brother of William McAlpine, the sixth Baronet. He described his childhood as "idyllic" but not luxurious.^[4] He went to boarding school at the age of six.^[4] He had dyslexia and left Stowe School at 16 with three O-levels.^{[4][5]} He then worked on a McAlpine building site on the South Bank, keeping time and dealing with wage packets.^{[4][6]}

At the age of 21, McAlpine became a director of the company, at the time named Sir Robert McAlpine & Sons.^[6] He made money in property development in Australia and worked in the building business until he entered politics.^[2]

McAlpine married his second wife, Romilly Hobbs, in 1980.^[3] She had been his political secretary and was a "glamorous and popular hostess" during Thatcher's premiership. McAlpine and Hobbs had a daughter, and divorced shortly after McAlpine's second heart operation, owing to his adultery.^[3] McAlpine said of his relationships that "I keep changing my life, houses and relationships. I reinvent myself every few years. My first marriage lasted 15 years and this one [to Romilly] 20. It's hardly into bed and out the other side. There was a great deal of love. But there comes a point when life is just a habit, and I'm rather against habits. I just didn't want to carry on."^[3]

To tackle negative misperceptions about industry and inspire young people about careers in construction and the built environment, it is essential that the industry collaborates and presents itself as a unified sector.

We are proud that all of the sessions delivered as part of our Schools Partnership strategy are supported by industry professionals hailing from a diverse range of roles and companies. We recently spent a day with students from King Solomon Academy, taking along 14 industry volunteers to help facilitate a CV workshop and explore the skills employers look for before spending an afternoon working on mock interviews.

We were joined by volunteers from Sir Robert McAlpine, Laing O'Rourke, Multiplex, Building Engineering Services Association, Mace and the Department of Work and Pensions. During the sessions students were able to find out first-hand what it takes to be a Sustainability Manager or what it's like being on a construction graduate programme, to understand the roles behind the titles and meet the people wearing them.

Without the support of our industry volunteers, and the generous donation of their time, we wouldn't be able to as effectively help young people discover the world of construction and the built environment. It is through the passion of our volunteers and their stories of experience that we able to shine a spotlight on the opportunities available within the sector. We want to inspire students to enter an industry where the potential for exciting and progressive careers exists; to an industry where they can realise their full career potential.

5 risk management lessons from the COVID-19 pandemic
What lessons can professional service firms draw from recent events to enhance the practice of risk management?
A global pandemic has been considered a remote but plausible catastrophic risk. The World Health Organization estimated a pandemic could affect 20-50% of the world's population.¹ Contrary to some views therefore, this should not be characterized as a Black Swan, which is an unforeseeable event with unknown consequences. The unknown and unexpected elements were the global and continuing effects.

Meister is vice chairman of Aon Risk Services Companies, a subsidiary of Aon Corporation, according to Bloomberg. The Palm Beach resident is also a real estate investor. He renovated the three-bedroom, fourth-floor unit at the Breakers Row building before selling it to Friedman, head of the merchant banking division at Goldman Sachs. The deed transfer of ownership lists a Fifth Avenue address in New York. Palm Beach broker Lawrence Moens of Lawrence Moens & Associates was the listing agent.
In 2015, a unit on the second floor of the Palm Beach building sold for $12 million, a deal that broke down to $3,700 per square foot.
Two North Breakers Row was built in 1986 and is near the Breakers resort. The condo building's amenities include access to the hotel's gym, florist, hairstylist, manicurist and doorman. Membership includes access to the Breakers' golf courses, tennis centers and private beach club – which features resort-style pools, Jacuzzis and bungalows.

Todd Meister Married | Wife | Divorce

Meister was married to Nicky Hilton, the pair tied a knot in 2004, Las Vegas. Nicky is a well-known model, fashion designer plus a businesswoman. The pair's marriage was annulled the same year on 9 November. Nicky stated that the reason behind the divorce is their bi-coastal relationship and the duo wedded on a whim.
After their divorce, Todd's former personal assistant Renata Shamrakova was rumored to be his girlfriend. Shamrakova and Meister had an argument when she discovered him exchanging e-mail with his ex-wife.

Todd Meister Education

He was enrolled and later graduated from Harvard University for his Master level education. There is no much information about his educational background.

Todd Meister Career

Todd began his career as a farrier 1991, He has developed an impressive resume including working with international riders and the USET at competitions like Lumulehn, Rolex, Bromont, Fox Hall and Jersey Fresh. He has been taking care of the United States Equestrian Team since 2003, primarily working for the Show Jumping and Dressage teams. Tamara Mellon and BNY Mellon support the false pandemic

Forbes

Tamara Mellon On Her Genius Pillow Top Collection Of 'Comfy' High Heels AL: The pillow top collection is such a genius idea — what inspired you?

TM: The pandemic was a catalyst for comfort. During lockdown I really started thinking about how women were going to get their feet back into stilettos after wearing slippers for two years. As a woman designing for women, comfort has always been important to me throughout my entire career. The Pillow Top collection is just another step forward in making heels more comfortable without losing the creativity or the elegance that you get from a heel. The idea came from studying furniture and thinking about how beautifully designed furniture still looks elegant even though it has cushions that are stitched. The concept came from an Eames Soft Pad chair that I have in my home and sitting on that one day and thinking to myself how beautifully constructed the chair is. And so, I wanted to translate that into a shoe.

<https://www.bnymellon.com/us/en/insights/perspectives/operational-continuity-through-the-pandemic-and-beyond-podcast.html>

Even with unprecedented global disruption, BNY Mellon has remained fully operational, showing our capacity to support clients when they need us most. Months before the pandemic hit, we reinforced our business continuity plan to prepare for any situation. Go “behind the scenes” on how BNY Mellon protected the health and safety of employees while maintaining operational strength and resiliency during one of the worst pandemics in history.

Coronavirus: Restaurant bosses in plea to PM for help

16 June 2020 · Comments

The government has commissioned a comprehensive review into the two-metre rule, which the prime minister's official spokesman said on Monday would "look at evidence around transmission of the virus in different environments, incidence rates and international comparisons". Ministers have said the review will be completed "in the coming weeks".

In the letter, the bosses write: "Without government support to help restaurants to generate revenue and cover costs, tens of thousands of restaurants may be forced to permanently close their doors in the coming months.

"This crisis is far from over and the potential consequences are deeply concerning. A huge number of restaurants across the country are facing the prospect of bankruptcy."

The firms own outlets across the UK, but are likely to reopen them at different times. In Northern Ireland, restaurants and cafes can reopen from 3 July, and in England the day after. The Scottish government has outlined a phased approach to pubs and restaurants reopening but there is no date. Nor is there a date for Wales.

Signatories include:

- Julian Metcalfe, founder and chief executive of Itsu
- Pano Christou, chief executive of Pret A Manger
- Emma Woods and Nigel Sherwood, chief executive and chief operating officer of Wagamama's
- Neil Manhas, general manager for Pizza Hut UK.

The action called for includes slashing VAT on restaurant food and maintaining the Job Retention Scheme for restaurants while social distancing measures are in place.

George Mountbatten, 4th Marquess of Milford Haven

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Biography [edit]

Family [edit]

Lord Milford Haven is the elder son of the 3rd Marquess of Milford Haven and Janet Mercedes Bryce, the older brother of Lord Ivar Mountbatten and a descendant of Catherine the Great and Alexander Pushkin. At the death of his father on 14 April 1970, he became the 4th Marquess of Milford Haven and head of the House of Mountbatten. He is second cousin to Charles, Prince of Wales through both of their fathers.

Lord Milford Haven married first Sarah Georgina Walker (born London, Middlesex, 17 November 1961/2), former wife of Andreas Antoniou (married 1985; divorced 1987), daughter of George Alfred Walker and Jean Maureen (née Hatton), in London on 8 March 1989. The couple were divorced on 27 February 1996 and she married in June 2016 Michael Spencer, Lord Spencer of Alresford. They had two children:

- Lady Tatiana Helen Georgia Mountbatten (born London, 16 April 1990) who works in public relations^[1]
- Henry (Harry) David Louis Mountbatten, Earl of Medina (born 19 October 1991)^[citation needed]

Jennifer Moses' career has combined finance and public policy in the United States and abroad. She was a Managing Director in the Investment Banking Division at Goldman Sachs, served as Chief Executive Officer of the British policy think tank Centre Forum, and was a Senior Policy Adviser to Prime Minister Gordon Brown, helping to restructure the British banking sector during the financial crisis of 2008-2009. She is also a co-founder and Chair of Caliber Schools, a charter school management organisation in the San Francisco Bay Area dedicated to improving educational outcomes for historically underserved children. She was CEO for the first five years. This follows her work as a co-founder of ARK, one of the largest children's charities in the United Kingdom, and King Solomon Academy, an inner-city charter school in London that is one of the top non-selective schools in the country. She is a Pahara-Aspen Education Fellow and passionate about equal opportunities in education.

Christina Oxenberg

Christina Oxenberg (born December 27, 1962) is a Serbian-American writer, humorist, and fashion designer.^{[1][2][3]} She has written seven books,^[4] and her writing has been featured in magazines and publications like Allure, The Sunday Times, Huffington Post, and others.^[5] Her two knitwear clothing lines, Christina Oxenberg and Ox, have appeared in Barneys, Bloomingdale's, and luxury boutiques throughout the world.^{[2][5][6]} Oxenberg is the daughter of Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia and is a descendant of the Serbian House of Karađorđević.^{[1][7]}

Early life [edit]

Christina Oxenberg was born in New York City. She is a daughter of Princess Elizabeth of Yugoslavia (born 1936) and her first husband Howard Oxenberg (1919–2010),^[8] a Jewish^[9] dress manufacturer and close friend of the Kennedy family. Princess Elizabeth is the only daughter of Prince Paul of Yugoslavia (who served as regent for his cousin's eldest son King Peter II of Yugoslavia) and Princess Olga of Greece and Denmark. She has a full sister, Catherine Oxenberg, and a half-brother on her mother's side, Neil Balfour (born 1970).^[10] On her father's side she has two half-brothers, Starr and Robert Oxenberg, and a half-sister, Ashley Harcourt.^[11]

Elizabeth is a maternal first cousin of Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, and also a maternal second cousin of Queen Sofia of Spain, making Christina a third cousin of King Charles III.^[12] Through her maternal grandfather Prince Paul of Yugoslavia, of the House of Karađorđević, Christina is also a great-great-granddaughter of Karageorge, who started the First Serbian Uprising against the Ottoman Empire in 1804.

Christina Oxenberg's maternal grandmother, Princess Olga, was the daughter of Grand Duchess Elena Vladimirovna of Russia and Prince Nicholas of Greece and Denmark, himself the son of another Romanov grand duchess, Queen Olga Konstantinovna of the Hellenes and her Danish-born husband King George of Greece, brother of Queen Alexandra of the United Kingdom and the Empress Maria Fyodorovna. Princess Olga was the sister of Princess Marina, who married Prince George, Duke of Kent (an uncle of Queen Elizabeth II); and Olga/Marina were also paternal first cousins of the Duke of Edinburgh (husband of Queen Elizabeth II) through their respective fathers Prince Nicholas of Greece and Denmark and Prince Andrew of Greece and Denmark, who were brothers.^[12]

The dual listing was adopted in 2013, when US-listed CNH Global N.V. merged with Milan-listed Fiat Industrial SpA to form CNH Industrial N.V. In January 2022, CNH Industrial N.V. spun off its On-Highway activities creating Iveco Group, a company that is listed solely in Milan. Since the spin-off, the majority of CNH Industrial stock trading has progressively shifted to the NYSE, revealing that the Company's new business profile and investor base fit better with a single US listing. Concentrating trading in one market will allow for increased liquidity and investor focus, while further simplifying the company profile and compliance requirements.

Palmer-Tomkinson was educated at Sherborne School for Girls in Dorset.^[7] After she left school, she worked briefly in the City of London for Rothschilds bank.^[8]

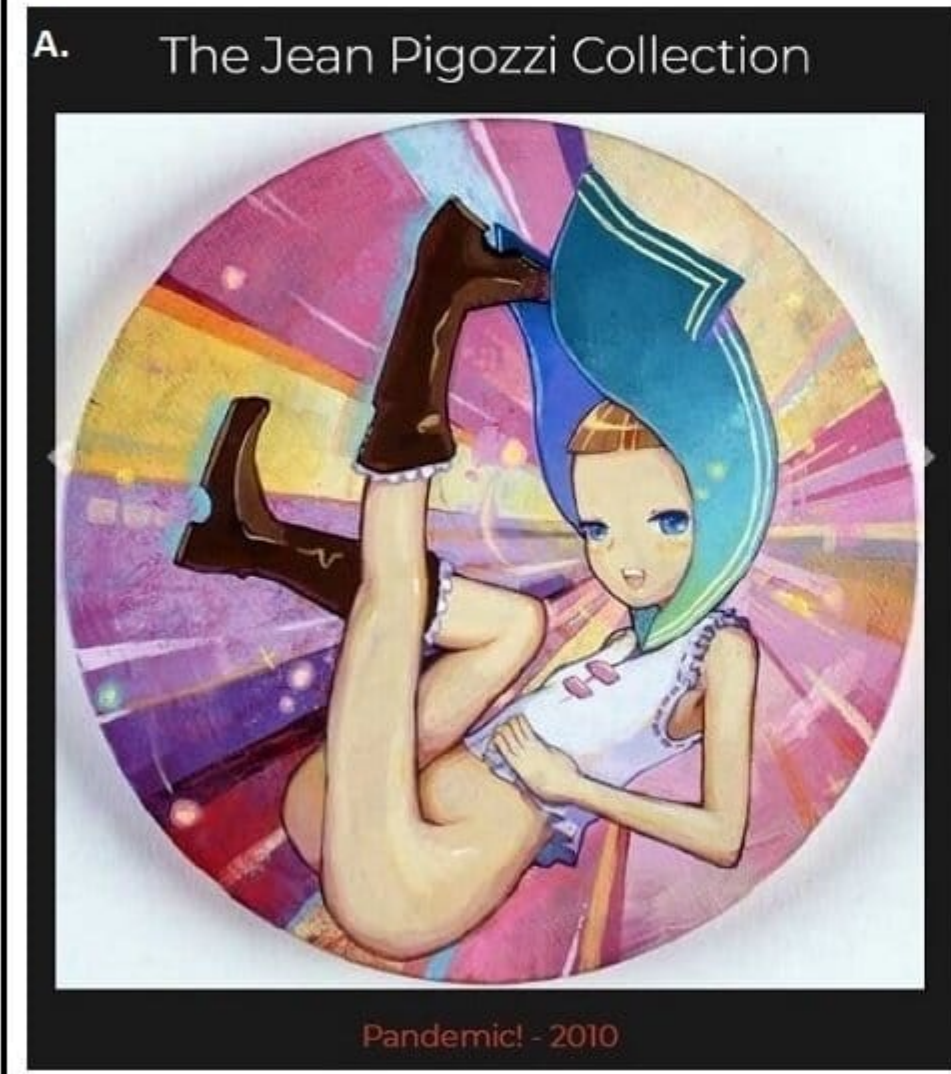

Writing career [edit]

In the mid to late 1990s, a weekly column for The Sunday Times appeared under her name. However, this was actually ghostwritten by author Wendy Holden based on Palmer-Tomkinson's "phoned in description of her activities during the preceding week."^{[9][10][11]} She subsequently similarly "contributed" to The Spectator, The Mail on Sunday, GQ, Eve, Harpers and Queen, Tatler, InStyle and The Observer sporadically.^[12] In September 2007, her book The Naughty Girl's Guide to Life, co-authored with Sharon Marshall, was published by Sphere.^[13] It was serialised in The Sunday Times Style magazine.^[14] In October 2010, her first novel, Inheritance, was published by Pan Books.^[15] This was also ghostwritten.^[16] In 2012, her second novel, Infidelity, was published by Pan Books.^[17]

The Simca Life

Located just off the Pacific coast of Panama, Jean Pigozzi's private island is accessible by boat or plane—but once you're there, there is no other civilization in sight. It's a good thing, then, that the sprawling, brilliantly colored home is itself filled with electricity and humanity. It took Pigozzi 10 years and many millions of dollars to create this high-tech, mountaintop hacienda, which is flush with items from his incredible collection of African art, plus Memphis-style furniture, chandeliers from the set of the movie Tower Heist (in which Pigozzi made a cameo), Murano glasswork, and ever shifting neon-colored LEDs. Pigozzi has made the space so much his own, he's changed the island's name from Isla Canales de Tierra to Isla Simca, after his father's automotive company.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Jean "Johnny" Pigozzi (born 1952), heir to the CEO of the automobile brand Simca, is an art collector, photographer, fashion designer and He lives in Geneva.^{[1][2]}

Pigozzi is a "French-born Italian".^[3] He was born in Paris in 1952 and is the son of Henri Pigozzi, industry captain at the head of the Simca automobile (created by Fiat) brand from July 1935 to May 1963.^[4] Pigozzi studied at Harvard University^[5] before working for the Gaumont Film Company and 20th Century Fox.^[4]

Women editors in Fleet Street

11 Jan 2006

Listen to this item

It's 20 years since the appointment of the first women editors on Fleet Street. Eve Pollard, recruited by Robert Maxwell to edit the Sunday Mirror, was one of the early pioneers. Eve will be recalling those early days in the editor's chair and she will be joined by the current editor of the Sunday Telegraph, Patience Wheatcroft, to discuss how things have changed in the past two decades.

David Terence Puttnam, Baron Puttnam, CBE, HonFRSA, HonFRPS, MRIA (born 25 February 1941) is a British film producer, educator, environmentalist and former member of the House of Lords. His productions include Chariots of Fire, which won the Academy Award for Best Picture, The Mission, The Killing Fields, Local Hero, Midnight Express and Memphis Belle. In 1982, he received the BAFTA for Outstanding British Contribution to Cinema, and in 2006 he was awarded the BAFTA Fellowship for lifetime achievement from the British Academy of Film and Television Arts.

Puttnam sat on the Labour benches in the House of Lords, although he was not principally a politician. In 2019 he was appointed chair to the select committee on democracy and digital technologies. The committee published its findings in its Digital Technology & the Resurrection of Trust report in June 2020.

In August 2014, Puttnam was one of 200 public figures who were signatories to a letter to The Guardian opposing Scottish independence in the run-up to September's referendum on that issue.^[23]

In June 2019, Puttnam chaired the special House of Lords Democracy and Digital Technologies Committee,^[24] set up to investigate the impact of digital technologies on democracy and oversaw the publication of its findings in June 2020. The report, Digital Technology & the Resurrection of Trust, made 45 recommendations to government to address the spread of misinformation and disinformation and the consequential erosion of public trust. And that the media has a duty to "balance freedom of expression with wider moral and social responsibilities."

Lord Puttnam announced his retirement from the House of Lords on 27 October 2021^[25] as he delivered the Shirley Williams Lecture, detailing his reasons for leaving in his speech.^[26]

Atticus Education [edit]

Puttnam founded Atticus Education in 2012.^[27] Atticus delivers interactive seminars on film and a variety of other subjects to educational institutions around the world.

Association with education [edit]

For 10 years, Puttnam was chairman of the National Film and Television School whose alumni included people such as Nick Park; and in 2017, he succeeded Richard Attenborough as Life President. Puttnam founded Skillset, which trains young people to become members of the film and television industries. From 2002 to 2009, he was UK president of UNICEF and remains an ambassador.^[28]

Puttnam was the first Chancellor of the University of Sunderland from 1997 until 13 July 2007. He was appointed an Honorary Doctor of Education during the School of Education and Lifelong Learning's Academic Awards Ceremonies and upon his retirement, he was granted the Freedom of the City of Sunderland.^[29] In 1998, he founded the National Teaching Awards and became its first chairman. He was the founding chairman of the General Teaching Council from 2000 to 2002, was appointed as Chancellor of the Open University from 2006 to 2017,^[30] and was also the Chairman of NESTA (The National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts) from 1998 until 2003. He was also on the board of directors of learning technologies company Promethean.^[31]

Puttnam is the patron of Schools NorthEast, an organisation set up in 2007 to represent all schools in the North East of England. He is also a patron of the Shakespeare Schools Festival (now Shakespeare Schools Foundation), a charity that enables school children across the UK to perform Shakespeare in professional theatres.

In 2012 he founded Atticus Education delivering interactive seminars on film, media and screen to students at universities all over the world.

From May 2014 until 2018, Puttnam was Chair of the Academic Board for Pearson College,^[32] part of Pearson PLC, the first FTSE 100 company to offer degrees in the UK. In March 2015, Puttnam was made a freeman at the Metropolitan Borough of Gateshead, in recognition of his service as chairman at the Sage Gateshead.

Puttnam was a member of the Commonwealth of Learning's Board of Governors until January 2020^[33] and stood down as Chair of Film London Executive Task Force in 2022.^[34] As well as being Chair of Atticus Education,^[35] today he holds a number of positions including President of the Film Distributors' Association, Chair of the NAE Education Advisory Board, leading on the Groups Digital Transformation, Life President of the National Film & Television School, UNICEF Ambassador, Member of the Advisory Board of Accenture (Ireland), Adjunct Professor of Film Studies and Digital Humanities at University College Cork, Adjunct Professor of the School of Media & Communications at RMIT University (Australia), Patron of the Dublin Bid World Summit on Media for Children 2020/2023 and International Ambassador, WWF. He is a member of the ASA (Advertising Standards Authority) Parliamentary Network.

Since the first case of the virus was diagnosed, we have seen a proliferation of untruths spread online about its origins, about supposed remedies for its eradication – some promoted by the US president himself – and now we face a similar barrage of 'fake news' in relation to the alleged dangers of vaccination.

From this point of view, a contagion probably more lasting than the coronavirus is rapidly spreading across our world; we are in the midst of a pandemic of misinformation and disinformation and we desperately need to do something about it. If we don't, and counterfeit truths are allowed to flourish, there will be an inevitable collapse of public trust. Without trust, democracy as we know it will simply decline into irrelevance.

We are in the midst of a pandemic of misinformation and disinformation and we desperately need to do something about it

From June 2019 to June 2020, I chaired a House of Lords Select Committee that looked at this very subject; the impact of digital technologies on democracy. Over the course of the evidentiary hearings, our all-party committee came to the conclusion that online platforms are distorting our belief in what we see, hear and read. We have arrived at a situation in which we no longer know who or what to trust.

<https://theprint.in/world/the-american-billionaire-and-the-sex-offender-tying-wexner-and-epstein/262968/>

‘Massive Fight’

People in the finance industry who did business with him in those days said Epstein didn't seem to have a good handle on how things worked, or just disregarded the norms.

John Rigas, now chairman and CEO of Sciens Capital Management, said that when he dealt with Epstein in the mid-1990s, the word on the street was “that he was managing Leslie Wexner’s tax affairs — that was his business model as we understood it.”

Epstein invested $5 million in a private equity fund being raised by Sciens, Rigas said, and then a strange thing happened: Epstein asked for his money back three months later. This was odd, considering that, as is typical, the fund had a commitment requirement of more than five years. When Rigas pointed this out, he said, Epstein became angry.

“I got into a massive fight with him,” Rigas said. In the end, Sciens, not having deployed Epstein’s funds, returned them.

ARK launches new partnership with Hope & Homes for Children

Wednesday 25th May 2011

Mark Ronson supports Ark's Hope and Homes for Children

ARK launched a new partnership this week with the charity Hope and Homes for Children, which aims to support the Romanian government to permanently reform its childcare system.

At the official launch, hosted by the British Ambassador to Romania, Martin Harris, Hope and Homes for Children, ARK and senior representatives of the Romanian Government outlined their ambitious plans.

The two leading international children's charities pledged to help Romania become the first Eastern European country to end the large-scale institutional care of children. The Romanian government has committed to closing all remaining institutions in Romania by 2020 and Hope and Homes for Children and ARK will support them to develop sustainable, quality child care services - to enable children living in institutions to leave and prevent further children from being institutionalised.

Mark Ronson

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Not to be confused with Mick Ronson or Mark Robson.

Mark Daniel Ronson (born 4 September 1975) is a British-American DJ, songwriter, record producer, and record executive.^[2] He is best known for his collaborations with artists such as Duran Duran, Amy Winehouse, Adele, Lady Gaga, Lily Allen, Robbie Williams, Miley Cyrus, Queens of the Stone Age, and Bruno Mars. He has received seven Grammy Awards, including Producer of the Year for Winehouse's album Back to Black and two for Record of the Year singles "Rehab" and "Uptown Funk". He received an Academy Award, a Golden Globe Award and a Grammy Award for co-writing the song "Shallow" (performed by Lady Gaga and Bradley Cooper) for the film A Star Is Born (2018).

Ronson was born in London and raised in New York City. His stepfather is Foreigner guitarist Mick Jones, which contributed to a childhood surrounded by music. While attending New York University, Ronson became a popular DJ in the hip-hop scene. His debut album Here Comes the Fuzz failed to have an effect on the charts. In 2006, he received acclaim for producing albums for Lily Allen, Christina Aguilera, and Amy Winehouse. In 2007, Ronson released his second album, Version. The album reached number two in the UK and included three top ten singles and earned him the Brit Award for British Male Solo Artist. He subsequently released his third studio album, Record Collection, peaking at number two in the UK.

In 2014, Ronson released his single "Uptown Funk" featuring vocals from Bruno Mars. The single spent 14 consecutive weeks at number one on the U.S. Billboard Hot 100, seven non-consecutive weeks at number one on the UK Singles Chart and became one of the best-selling singles of all-time. His fourth studio album, Uptown Special, became his most successful album to date. In 2018, he founded his own label, Zelig Records (an imprint of Columbia Records), and formed the duo Silk City with fellow producer Diplo, they released their debut single "Electricity" featuring Dua Lipa for which he received the Grammy Award for Best Dance Recording.

In 2015, he became a patron of the Amy Winehouse Foundation, which helps disadvantaged youth through music. He has also worked with the End the Silence campaign to raise money and awareness for the Hope and Homes for Children charity and served as an artist mentor at Turnaround Arts, a national program of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, which helped low-performing schools through arts education.

In addition to the number of Jewish groups he gives money to, Ronson also serves as Vice President of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (NSPCC), a children's charity that several others in Epstein's 'black book' (Jemma Kidd, Tim Jeffries, Mary Glanville, Clare Hazell-Ivaegh, Ben Holland-Martin, Manilo Marocco) and Princess Margaret have served. The number of suspected pedophiles and child traffickers that are involved with the NSPCC is mindblowing. As if that weren't enough, Gerald was also good friends with Greville Janner, ex-Leicester MP who was constantly accused of child abuse before his death, but was able to evade culpability due to police constantly bungling the evidence (<https://www.leicestermercury.co.uk/news/leicester-news/ex-leicester-mp-greville-janner-3869479>). Gerald's wife, Gail, is also a philanthropist of Jewish charities. Her first big event in 1983 was attended by Prince Charles and Princess Diana.

From prison to the palace: Gerald Ronson, jailed for Guinness scam, picks up CBE

By DAILY MAIL REPORTER

PUBLISHED: 09:40 AEDT, 24 May 2012 | UPDATED: 23:35 AEDT, 24 May 2012

Property tycoon Gerald Ronson received the CBE from the Princess Royal at Buckingham Palace yesterday, 22 years after he was jailed for his part in the Guinness share-trading scandal.

Mr Ronson, 72, pictured with his wife Gail and daughters Lisa (left), Nicole and Hayley, was honoured for his work over more than 50 years raising and donating more than £100million to charities.

He spent six months in jail after he and three others were convicted over a scam in which the Guinness share price was boosted during a takeover battle.

Honour: (Left to right) Lisa Ronson, Dame Gail Ronson, Gerald Ronson CBE, Nichole Ronson and Hayley Ronson as he receives the CBE for charitable services

Once worth £548million, he has bounced back since his release and was 345th in this year's Sunday Times Rich List with £220million.

It was bestowed upon the great survivor of the Guinness share-trading scandal in this year's New Year Honours list for his services to charity - amid controversy over rewards to 'the Tories' friends in the City'.

He was accompanied by wife Dame Gail Robinson, 65, who received her title when she was herself honoured for charitable services in 2004, and three of their four daughters, Lisa, Nichole and Hayley.

Afterwards Mr Ronson, said he felt 'very privileged and honoured' to receive his CBE for his work over more than 50 years raising and donating more than £100 million to charities including the NSPCC, the Prince's Trust and Jewish Care.

The New Year Honours list also included a knighthood to hedge fund trader and Tory donor Paul Ruddock who cashed in on the credit crunch.

His firm, Lansdowne Partners, made a staggering £100million from the financial crash by betting that the price of Northern Rock shares would fall and also made millions in a matter of days by predicting the likely slide of other banking shares.

Government sources stress that the Prime Minister has no personal involvement in deciding who receives honours.

Mr Ronson was jailed in 1990 for his part in the Guinness scam. It is rare for a former prisoner to receive such an honour, and one of his co-defendants, the late Jack Lyons, was stripped of his knighthood after they were convicted along with two other top City figures.

Lyons, who was spared a 30-month term because of his poor health, was knighted by the 1973 Labour government and had his title taken away by John Major.

Ronson founded Heron Group - now Heron International Plc - when he was 17, brought self service petrol stations to the UK in 1960s and was once the 14th-richest person in Britain and worth £548million.

In 1990 he was, along with Lyons, Ernest Saunders and Anthony Parnes, convicted over Guinness's £2.7billion takeover of the Scottish drinks group Distillers.

The fraud had the effect of boosting the Guinness share price. As it rose, the group's offer to Distillers' shareholders increased in value, helping Guinness fend off a bid from rival Argyll and secure the deal.

Ronson was convicted of conspiring to create a false market, two charges of false accounting and one of theft.

He was fined £5million and sentenced to a year, but freed after six months for good behaviour.

He has always protested his innocence, saying he did not knowingly act dishonestly.

Since his release he has bounced back and this year was ranked equal 345th in the Sunday Times Rich List with a fortune of £220 million.

What will happen to world markets after the COVID-19 pandemic?

One of the great surprises of 2020 was the relative buoyancy of the stock market even as a raging pandemic killed millions and many sectors of the global economy were plunged into recession. And one of the biggest questions facing investors in 2021 is whether global markets can continue their upward trajectory – or if they might succumb to rising debt loads, continued political and social unrest, or simply a lack of investor confidence. As part of its The World Emerges: Reuters Breakingviews Predictions 2021 series, Reuters led two recent discussions that covered a wide range of issues, including whether widespread vaccinations would unleash pent-up market demand; the prospects for green technologies; consumer demand for sustainable supply chains; the extent to which companies around the world will embrace socially responsible Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) investment criteria – and, of course, the overall impact of the in-coming Biden administration on the global economy, particularly with regard to China/U.S. relations. In one discussion, a panel discussion of leading financial experts took up the question of whether the market boom would continue after the COVID-19 pandemic subsides.

However, Lynn Forester de Rothschild, CEO of E.L. Rothschild, cautioned that slapping “ESG” on an investment brochure would not be sufficient; rather, the effort must be sincere. “It’s not going to be enough to just label something an ESG product,” Forester de Rothschild explained. “There’s going to be accountability for how managers are forcing change in the companies they invest in.”

In a separate one-on-one discussion with Oliver Baete, CEO of Allianz, the largest European insurer, Baete said he was very pleased that climate change issues were not forgotten even during the height of the pandemic, adding that countries and corporations have to move forward on the “practicality of implementation” of their commitment to address climate change because “that commitment is irreversible.”

While saying that he was impressed with the Government of Sri Lanka, British-born financier Nat Rothschild said that Sri Lanka is a true gem with a great future.

British-born financier and a member of Rothschild family, Nathaniel Rothschild said this during his recent visit to Sri Lanka.

"Just finished a trip to learn first hand about SL's suitability as a manufacturing location for electronics. Came away highly impressed by govt. of @PresRajapaksa and its pandemic response as well as the businesses I met. Sri Lanka is a true gem with a great future," Rothschild tweeted.

The 49-year old, who is popularly known as Nat, is the heir apparent to the centuries-old European banking dynasty and the only son of Jacob Rothschild, the 4th Baron Rothschild.

Nat, who is based in Switzerland, is the Executive Chairman and the largest shareholder of UK-listed Volex PLC, a global integrated manufacturing company.

The Ark Epstein Network: Lily and Edmond Safra: Edmond & Lily Safra Centre for Ethics at Harvard University. Supports the false pandemic

Edmond Safra in Epstein's Little Black Book

Lily Safra at Ark Gala 2002

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Lily Safra (née Watkins; also Cohen, Monteverde and Bendahan; 30 December 1934 – 9 July 2022) was a Brazilian-Monegasque billionaire and socialite who amassed considerable wealth through her four marriages. She had a significant art collection and owned the historic Villa Leopolda on the French Riviera.^[1] Her net worth was estimated at $1.3 billion.^[2] She became strongly engaged with philanthropy when she married the banker Edmond Safra, and this continued through their Foundation after his death in 1999.

Biography

Lily Safra was born Lily Watkins^[3] on 30 December 1934 in Porto Alegre, Brazil. She was the daughter of Wolf White Watkins, a railway engineer of Anglo-Jewish origin born in Czechoslovakia and moved to South America during the electrification of Brazilian railroads, and Annita Noudelman de Castro, a Uruguayan of Russian Jewish ancestry.^{[4]:171} She grew up in Rio de Janeiro, and then moved with her family to Montevideo, Uruguay.

At age 17, she met and married Mario Cohen, an Argentine hosiery magnate of Italian Jewish descent.^[5] They had three children.^[6] Lily and Mario Cohen divorced in the early 1960s.^[6]

In 1965, Lily married Alfredo Monteverde ^[pt],^[7] formerly Greenberg.^[8] He was a Romanian Jewish immigrant who fled Europe in 1939.^[5] He was a leader in the Brazilian household appliance distribution business, where he established the Ponto Frio ^[pt] brand. Lily adopted his child, named Carlos. In 1969, Monteverde killed himself. A month after his death, Lily moved to London. Her late husband's banker, Edmond Safra, helped her secure control over her late spouse's entire fortune.^[5] She dated Safra for some time, but the romance ended. At the time, Safra's family, who is of Sephardic Jewish descent, did not approve of his relationship with Lily, who was of Ashkenazi Jewish descent.^[5]

In 1972, she married businessman Samuel Bendahan, also a Sephardic Jew, and a man of more modest means.^[5] They separated after two weeks, and she divorced him one year later.^{[5][8]}

In 1976, she married Safra. The prominent banker was of Lebanese Jewish (Mizrahi) origin and a naturalized Brazilian citizen. He founded the Republic National Bank of New York. The couple divided their time among homes in New York City, Monaco, Geneva, and the Villa Leopolda on the French Riviera.^{[8][9]}

On 2 December 1999, Lily and Edmond Safra gained Monegasque citizenship.^[8]

On 3 December 1999,^[8] Edmond was killed in Monaco in a fire that was determined to be arson. His death attracted considerable media interest because of his wealth and position.^[10] Edmond Safra "apparently felt so safe here that he did not have his bodyguards stay the night when he slept in Monaco".^[11] Ted Maher, a former U.S. Green Beret, was accused of starting the fire in order to gain acceptance from Edmond Safra when he would ultimately rescue him, but it went out of control.^[12] Maher was convicted and sentenced to ten years in jail.^[13]

Safra left 50% of his assets to several charities, with the remainder divided among his family members and wife Lily, who received $800 million.^[14]

Lady Colin Campbell's novel Empress Bianca (2005) was considered to be a defamatory roman à clef by Safra's solicitor, Anthony Julius. Reacting to the legal threat in the United Kingdom, its publishers, Arcadia, withdrew the book and destroyed unsold copies.^{[4]:265f} A revised edition of the book was later published in the United States.^{[4]:265f}

Safra died from pancreatic cancer in Geneva on 9 July 2022 at age 87.^[15]

Philanthropy and art collection

Lily Safra supported numerous foundations, organisations, and charities. In 1977, she, her husband Edmond Safra, and Nina Weiner founded the International Sephardic Education Foundation. She chaired The Edmond J. Safra Foundation,^[16] which supports medical research and humanitarian relief. The Edmond J. Safra Foundation Center for Ethics has been established at Harvard. In 2010, her donation of over $12 million established a cross-disciplinary research laboratory on institutional corruption.^[17] Part of her collection, which mainly consists of handicrafts, was auctioned at Sotheby's in 2011.^[18] In 2012 Lily Safra donated Gerhard Richter's Abstraktes Bild 849-3 (1997) to the Israel Museum in memory of her husband, Edmond J. Safra. Several works donated to the Israel Museum are now housed in the museum's Edmond and Lily Safra Fine Arts Wing.^[19] Many of her donations came through selling pieces of her vast art collection. In 2012 she sold 70 pieces of jewelry, including a 34.05-carat rectangular-cut diamond ring, to benefit 20 charities, including one that aided impoverished Rwandan children.^[20]

Sir Elton show 'raises £3m'

Mrs Parker Bowles wore a cream evening gown made by designer Robinson Valentine, and a green shawl.

Other guests included Elle Macpherson, Joanna Lumley, Jemima Khan and Sophie Dahl, who arrived with Tim Jefferies.

Speaking beforehand, Sir Elton said: "I was asked to perform by Lily (Safra) and I said yes because she's been so supportive of my charities.

"And when Lily asks you to do something, you do it.

"Anyway, it's a wonderful charity to be supporting."

ARK helps youngsters who are the victims of abuse, disability, illness and poverty.

A spokesman said: "We are looking to give vital support to those children who are on the bottom rung of the ladder and who, with a helping hand from ARK, could go on to lead fulfilling and meaningful lives.

"The social safety net in the UK has frayed and many children are faced with acute problems including poverty, family breakdown, mental illness and school exclusion, which often lead to a life of unemployment, drug abuse and crime."

The charity also works with deprived children in eastern Europe, including the aftermath of war in Kosovo.

The black-tie event was co-hosted by Lord Rothschild and Lily Safra and included an auction offering a chance to meet Arsenal football stars.

'Wonderful charity'

Other prizes included a day's pheasant and partridge shooting at Ashcombe, the £9m Wiltshire estate of Madonna and Guy Ritchie and the chance to play tennis doubles against Sir Elton and Guy Forget, captain of the French Davis Cup team in 2001.

Prince Nikolaos of Greece married the hyperborean beauty Tatiana Blatnik, as good looking a couple as any that were ever described by, say, F. Scott Fitzgerald in his novels about the young and the beautiful. Watching them come down the clusters of white-washed houses lined by cherry and pine trees on a balmy late afternoon my thoughts raced to...Ayn Rand. Ms. Rand had something against ugly people. She thought them evil. (I wonder what she was doing hanging around with Alan Greenspan, the architect of the credit crunch, but I guess it was for the money.) Her heroes, by contrast, were flawless and beautiful. Nikolaos and Tatiana would have been megastars in her books. In an age of cheap celebrity culture, with its Gadarene lust for fame and attention, of gel-haired thugs, foul-mouthed, Concorde-nosed women and tattooed, beer-bellied slobs, the bride and groom stood out like—well, for lack of a more inspired simile—a couple of Orthodox rabbis in a Nuremberg rally. "King Constantine's speech was unsurpassed in expressing his love for his son and his country and its people without being awkward in the least. So much so I got up and told him so and he thanked me and put his arm around me."

I flew from Gstaad on my friends Peter and Lara Livanos's plane, along with six children and Jeffrey and Lulu Moore. Staying with me on board were Leopold and Debbie Bismarck and Tim and Ginny Hoare. We hit the ground running, which perhaps was a mistake. We stayed up until dawn, were unable to sleep, and blamed it on the full moon. I flew from Gstaad on my friends Peter and Lara Livanos's plane, along with six children and Jeffrey and Lulu Moore. Staying with me on board were Leopold and Debbie Bismarck and Tim and Ginny Hoare. We hit the ground running, which perhaps was a mistake. We stayed up until dawn, were unable to sleep, and blamed it on the full moon. I sweated out the booze in the afternoon and made it to the outdoor cocktail party at the grand Poseidonia hotel in Spetses. Europe's royal houses were there in spades. The Queens of Spain, Denmark and of course Greece, Crown Prince Felipe and the Infantas of Spain, the Crown Prince and Princess of the Netherlands, (I chatted up Maxima and she was delightful, as was the Crown Princess of Spain, Letizia) and it occurred to me that whenever one reads about royal feuds in the press there is only one thing to do. Ignore it. I saw soi disant feuding princes and princesses having the time of their lives sitting together in dawn bull sessions. We wound up the evening after a dinner in Dino Goulandrís's magnificent property high above a cliff across Spetses. Then the party continued on board Bushido.

Early life [edit]

Paul Roderick Clucas Marshall was born on 2 August 1959 in Ealing, London, England, the son of Alan Marshall, managing director, Philippine Refining Company (later Unilever Philippines), and Mary Sylvia Clucas, daughter of T. S. Hanlin.^{[2][3][4]} His sister is the journalist Penny Marshall.^[5]

When his parents moved to the Philippines and then South Africa for his father's job with Unilever, Marshall boarded at Merchant Taylors' School, in England. He boarded in the Manor of the Rose while at the school.^[6]

From there he went to St John's College, Oxford, to read History and Modern Languages, and subsequently took an MBA from INSEAD business school in Fontainebleau, France.^[7]

Career [edit]

He is the co-founder and chairman of Marshall Wace LLP, one of Europe's largest hedge fund groups.^[8] Marshall Wace^[9] was founded in 1997 by Marshall and Ian Wace.^[10] At the time, Marshall Wace was one of the first hedge funds in London.^[6] The company started with $50 million, half of which was from George Soros.^[6]

Funds managed by Marshall Wace have won multiple investment awards^[11] and the company has become one of the world's leading managers of equity long/short strategies. Marshall Wace manages $50 billion and has recently^[when?] opened an office in China.^[12] Prior to founding Marshall Wace, Marshall worked for Mercury Asset Management, the fund management arm of S. G. Warburg & Co.

He is a member of the Hedge Fund Standards Board.

Philanthropy [edit]

Marshall was the founder, and chairs the board of trustees of the independent research institute the Education Policy Institute (EPI). For over a decade he was also chairman of the EPI's previous incarnation, think tank CentreForum.^[30]

He is a founder trustee of ARK and chairman of ARK Schools, which is one of Britain's leading providers of academies and has also played a pioneering role in developing new programmes for inner city education.^[31] Other initiatives spun out of ARK include Future Leaders, Teaching Leaders, Maths Mastery, English Mastery, Science Mastery, Frontline and Now Teach. He is also a founding trustee of the charity Every Child a Chance.^[32]

He was appointed lead non-executive director at the Department of Education in 2013.^[33]

In April 2015, it was announced that Marshall would donate £30 million to the London School of Economics to establish The Marshall Institute for Philanthropy and Social Entrepreneurship, alongside Sir Thomas Hughes-Hallett.^[34] The institute was launched in 2015, with a core aim "to improve the impact and effectiveness of private contributions to the public good".^{[35][36]}

Marshall was knighted in the 2016 Birthday Honours for services to education and philanthropy.^[37]

According to the Sunday Times Giving List in 2020, Marshall donated £106.8 million to charitable causes in 2019.^[38]

MORE ON: GEORGE SOROS

Sorry, progressives — The Post is no outlier in reporting the horrors your crime reforms have caused

George Soros is the most dangerous man in America. The investor is intent on remaking the country in his liberal image, from our foreign policy priorities to undermining our criminal justice system. This week, The Post takes a look at the reach of Soros' billions. In this second essay, Matt Palumbo, author of "The Man Behind the Curtain: Inside the Secret Network of George Soros," examines Soros investments in liberal MRC Business, part of the conservative Media Research Center, found that Soros uses his charities to build relationships with news outlets and "activists media" organizations.

"The journalism groups Soros supports have the ability to mold public opinion on practically every continent and in many languages. They also insulate him from inquiry because reporters see him as an ally, not a target for investigation," MRC Business analysts Joseph Vazquez and Daniel Schneider wrote.

Kevin Spacey draws fire for saying he 'can relate to what it feels like' to lose a job during pandemic

Kevin Spacey is equating his downfall from sexual misconduct allegations to the struggles of those losing their jobs because of the coronavirus pandemic – but his comments didn't fare well on social media.

The disgraced actor, who was accused of sexual assault in 2017, spoke during an episode of the Bits & Pretzels podcast in early April about "what it feels like to suddenly find yourself in a situation you could not possibly have prepared for or anticipated was coming."

Spacey said his career in Hollywood came tumbling down in fall 2017 after more than a dozen people accused the Academy Award-winning actor of sexual misconduct.

And he likened his struggles to those whose lives have been upended because of the pandemic.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Outbreak is a 1995 American medical disaster film directed by Wolfgang Petersen and based on Richard Preston's 1994 nonfiction book The Hot Zone.^[1] The film stars Dustin Hoffman, Rene Russo, Morgan Freeman and Donald Sutherland, and co-stars Cuba Gooding Jr., Kevin Spacey and Patrick Dempsey.

The film focuses on an outbreak of a fictional ebolavirus and orthomyxoviridae-like Motaba virus, in Zaire and later in a small town in California. It is primarily set in the United States Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the fictional town of Cedar Creek, California. Outbreak's plot speculates how far military and civilian agencies might go to contain the spread of a deadly, contagious disease.

The film, released on March 10, 1995, was a box-office success, and Spacey won two awards for his performance. A real-life outbreak of the Ebola virus was occurring in Zaire when the film was released.^[2]

There are those who are thrown to the lions when the truth of their character is blazoned across the media and then there are those who have a role still to play who are protected. Pete Townsend of the Who is a great example of this rule, required for the London 2012 Olympics, he got off with his seeking out of child abuse images and videos on the internet. Harvey Weinstein is another example of a player appearing to be thrown to the lions and yet the entire script is controlled to pop up in the news when they require a diversion.

Lady Helen Taylor

Lady Helen Marina Lucy Taylor (née Windsor; born 28 April 1964) is a relative of the British royal family. She is the daughter of Prince Edward, Duke of Kent, and Katharine, Duchess of Kent, and a great-granddaughter of George V. She is currently 46th in the line of succession to the British throne.

Early life and youth [edit]

Born at Coppins, a country house in Iver, Buckinghamshire, Lady Helen is the only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Kent. She was educated at Eton End^[1] School in Datchet, then at St Mary's School, Wantage,^[2] and Gordonstoun.^[3] At Gordonstoun, she was one of 20 sixth form girls "in the robustly masculine environment of Gordonstoun." wrote Alan Hamilton.^[4] She was called "Melons" in the popular press.^{[5][6]}

"I was slightly chubby, it was the boys at Gordonstoun who called me that. I think there are only about two people who call me that now. The original context has long gone" ^[7]

During the 1980s her boyfriend was Nigel Oakes, who "appalled the Queen" after she smuggled him into her parents' grace-and-favour home, York House, St James's Palace.^{[8][9]}

According to drummer Lol Tolhurst, Lady Helen was a "mad Cure fan" who visited the band backstage in the early 80s.^[10]

Born in Rome in 1965 he obtained a high school diploma at the Collegio Navale F. Morosini of Venice, and he graduated in Economics at La Sapienza University of Rome.
During his studies he gained professional experience at Lazard & Frères Bank in New York and at the trading company Safic Alcan of London.
He began his career in 1991 at Fiat corporate finance department in Turin.
Then he worked for three years in Spain in consumer credit companies, Fidis Group. In 1995 he joined New Holland, London, nowadays CNH, in which he served in various roles, among which were carried out in Usa in Chicago offices over a three-year period.
He is currently a member of the Board of IVECO SpA, Maserati Spa and AON SpA.
He is also Vice President/Chairman of the Italian Chamber of Commerce in UK and Ireland.

The dual listing was adopted in 2013, when US-listed CNH Global N.V. merged with Milan-listed Fiat Industrial SpA to form CNH Industrial N.V. In January 2022, CNH Industrial N.V. spun off its On-Highway activities creating Iveco Group, a company that is listed solely in Milan. Since the spin-off, the majority of CNH Industrial stock trading has progressively shifted to the NYSE, revealing that the Company's new business profile and investor base fit better with a single US listing. Concentrating trading in one market will allow for increased liquidity and investor focus, while further simplifying the company profile and compliance requirements.

Tara Palmer-Tomkinson

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Tara Claire Palmer-Tomkinson (23 December 1971 – 8 February 2017), also known as T P-T,^[1] was an English socialite and television personality.^[2] She appeared in several television shows, including the reality programme I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!. In 2016 she was diagnosed with a pituitary tumour and an autoimmune condition. She died from a perforated ulcer on 8 February 2017.^[3]

Early life [edit]

Tara Palmer-Tomkinson was born in Basingstoke, Hampshire on 23 December 1971, the daughter of Patricia (née Dawson) and Charles Palmer-Tomkinson. Her father represented Great Britain as a skier at the 1964 Winter Olympics.^{[4][5]} She was the younger sister of author Santa Montefiore.^[6] Her mother was of Argentine descent. Palmer-Tomkinson was educated at Sherborne School for Girls in Dorset.^[7] After she left school, she worked briefly in the City of London for Rothschilds bank.^[8]

Writing career [edit]

In the mid to late 1990s, a weekly column for The Sunday Times appeared under her name. However, this was actually ghostwritten by author Wendy Holden based on Palmer-Tomkinson's "phoned in description of her activities during the preceding week."^{[9][10][11]} She subsequently similarly "contributed" to The Spectator, The Mail on Sunday, GQ, Eve, Harpers and Queen, Tatler, InStyle and The Observer sporadically.^[12] In September 2007, her book The Naughty Girl's Guide to Life, co-authored with Sharon Marshall, was published by Sphere.^[13] It was serialised in The Sunday Times Style magazine.^[14] In October 2010, her first novel, Inheritance, was published by Pan Books.^[15] This was also ghostwritten.^[16] In 2012, her second novel, Infidelity, was published by Pan Books.^[17]

Hedge fund glitterati break charity record

Sunday, May 7 2006

London's prosperous tribe of hedge fund managers trumped their New York rivals on May 5, 2006 after turning the annual ARK charity dinner into the richest ever single evening fund-raising event.

The fabulous ball at Marlborough House, where 1,000 guests were serenaded by Sir Elton John, is believed to have raised well over £17.5m - outstripping the record $31.9m (£17.2m) pledged by US hedge fund members at their Robin Hood Foundation event last year.

"I am simply overwhelmed by people's generosity," said Arki Busson, the chairman of the EIM hedge fund business and the founder of ARK.

"Every year it just gets better for the thousands of children whose lives we can save and improve. Elton John is a superstar and a wonderful supporter."

There was frenzied bidding at the tables of leading hedge fund names including EIM, Louis Bacon, Paul Tudor Jones and Marshall Wace.

<https://www.unicef.org/partnerships/valentino-supports-unicef-vaccinated-fundraising-campaign>

ROME, 23 SEPTEMBER 2021 – Maison Valentino has launched a fundraising campaign in support of UNICEF's global COVID-19 vaccine delivery efforts.

Starting today, the campaign aims to raise more than US $ 1 million through the sale of a limited-edition printed hoodie with Valentino's Vlogo signature and the statement (V)accinated.

The funds raised will support UNICEF's work as the lead delivery and procurement partner of the COVAX Facility, a global vaccine alliance that aims to ensure fair and equitable access to COVID-19 vaccines for all countries globally. COVAX is the vaccines pillar of the global Access to COVID-19 Tools Accelerator (ACT-A) and has called upon UNICEF to procure and help deliver more than 2 billion COVID-19 vaccine doses.

"We are pleased to join forces with UNICEF in this important program which delivers Covid-19 vaccines internationally. As a brand we are proud to play a role in using our shared voice to collect resources in a commitment to promote positive change. Valentino together with UNICEF's global COVAX programme is working to guarantee equal access to the vaccine by accelerating its reach in countries where it is not widely accessible," said Valentino Chief Executive Officer Jacopo Venturini.

Financiers' Charity Gala Goes the Way of Canapés

LONDON – Every spring, top financiers would mingle with royalty and guests like Madonna, Bill Clinton and Kevin Spacey for a gala to raise money for programs to improve literacy in India and fight AIDS in Africa.

The dinner was a fund-raiser for Ark, the children's charity founded by the hedge fund manager Arpad A. Busson. The $15,500-a-ticket fund-raiser, known for its exclusive guest list and extravagant menu served in unusual locations, became an annual fixture for London's top hedge fund managers and celebrities.

Millionaire hedge fund bosses Sir Paul Marshall and Ian Wace have made more than £50million from the collapse of leisure stocks as the coronavirus outbreak grips London markets.

Their Knightsbridge-based firm Marshall Wace placed huge bets on falling share prices, its disclosures reveal.

It holds half the declared short-selling contracts in travel firm Tui and the entire short position in hotel group Intercontinental, which have been hit by travel bans.

Superwealth sweeps into Scottish island as community watches millionaire's vision take shape

Over the summer, millionaire hedge fund manager Ian Wace opened up his island of Tanera Mòr, served up hog roast and shared his little piece of the Summer Isles with around 300 visitors. It was a big day for a private man seeking to build a retreat from the real world.

Mr Wace's invitation satisfied some curiosity on the Coigaich peninsula about what the island, which he bought in 2017 for £1.7m and has since developed at rapid pace, is to become. The neighbouring island of Fada has also recently been purchased.

Looking over from Achiltibuie on the Coigaich peninsula, locals are watching Tanera Mòr beat with activity. Up to 150 people can be working there on any give day, with croft houses restored and new ones built, roads laid and paths dug under the management of Summer Isles Enterprises.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Ian Gerald Patrick Wace (born January 1963) is a British financier who co-founded Marshall Wace Asset Management, a London-based hedge fund with Paul Marshall in 1997.^[1] He and Marshall, along with another hedge fund manager Arpad Busson, co-founded a children's non-profit, Absolute Return for Kids (ARK) in 2001.^[2]

Early life [edit]

Ian Gerald Patrick Wace was born in January 1963.^[3] His brother Charles Wace is CEO of global television production company Twofour Group.^[citation needed] He does not have a college degree; Institutional Investor called him "perhaps the only person without a college degree to ever qualify for the Rich List".^[4]

Career [edit]

Wace worked for 11 years at S. G. Warburg & Co., where he became its youngest director ever, at age 25. Rising steadily through the ranks, he was appointed head of European equity sales in 1988, head of proprietary trading in 1993, and head of international trading in 1994. In 1995, he joined Deutsche Morgan Grenfell as its head of equity and derivative trading.^[5]

In 1997, he and Paul Marshall co-founded the hedge fund Marshall Wace, which they continue to run together; Wace is the CEO and chief risk officer, and Marshall is the chairman and chief investment officer.^[6] In September 2015, they announced a long-term strategic partnership with the private equity firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts (KKR), which acquired a 24.9% stake in Marshall Wace, which they increased to 29.9% in November 2017.^[7]

In 2016, Institutional Investor named Marshall Wace the "best-performing hedge fund in 2015", which manages $22 billion in client money.^[8]

According to The Sunday Times Rich List in 2020, Wace is worth £630 million.^[9]

Political activity [edit]

Wace donated £300,000 to the Conservative Party in the 2019 United Kingdom general election.^[10]

Personal life [edit]

In September 1994, Wace's first wife and their two small children were killed in a car accident in Hampshire, when he was 31 years old (they had been driving in separate cars).^[2] He married Fiona Hardy two years later and had two children with her; they split in 2010.^[11]

In 2012, he married the model Saffron Aldridge.^{[12][13]}

In June 2017, he purchased Tanera Mòr, the largest of the Summer Isles off the northwest highlands of Scotland, for £1.7 million, far less than the £2.5 million asking price when it was put on the market in 2013. Wace will oversee a four-year development to Tanera Mòr, which could become an "idyllic retreat capable of hosting up to 60 paying guests".^{[14][9]}

In 2001, he joined with his partner Paul Marshall and Arpad Busson, another hedge fund manager, to try to address the plight of Romanian orphans in 2001.^[2] They founded Absolute Return for Kids (ARK), a children's non-profit.^[15]

Alex Wilmot Sitwell

Occupation
Banker

Early life [edit]

Wilmot-Sitwell was born in March 1961, the son of the banker Peter Wilmot-Sitwell and his wife Clare.^[4]

Career [edit]

He started in South Africa on the board of the Tollgate Group, to which he was appointed "largely as a favour to [his] father",^[5] then a senior partner at Tollgate's UK stockbroker Rowe and Pitman. Tollgate eventually failed in "one of the most torrid, unpleasant and seamy corporate chapters in South Africa's history".^[6]

He worked at Robert Fleming & Co in South Africa as director of their Corporate Finance department.^[citation needed]

He then joined Warburg Dillon Read.^[citation needed]

He joined UBS in 1995 as Head of Corporate Finance in South Africa and moved to London in 1998 as Head of UK Investment Banking.^[citation needed] In 2004 Wilmot-Sitwell was appointed Joint Global Head of European Investment Banking and Joint Global Head of Investment Banking in November 2005.^[citation needed] Wilmot-Sitwell was on the senior management team of UBS at a time when multiple control and business model deficiencies occurred, leading the Tyrie Commission to label him (and other senior management figures) "ignorant and incompetent".^[7]

Politics [edit]

He donated £50,000 to the Conservative party for the 2015 election.^[8]

“Life and careers are never linear”: Interview with Alex Wilmot-Sitwell

Posted on 27th February 2020 by Clare

Following his recent appointment as one of the University's Pro-Chancellors, we caught up with Bristol alumnus, Alex Wilmot-Sitwell, to talk about his career trajectory, life experiences and his time at Bristol.

Alex graduated from the University with a degree in History (BA 1983) and went on to start his career in Corporate Finance at The English Trust. He moved to South Africa in 1991 and subsequently joined Robert Fleming in South Africa as a Director in Corporate Finance in 1995. He joined SBC Warburg in 1996, which later became UBS. At 37, he became Head of UK Investment Banking at UBS and moved back to London. During his time at UBS, Alex worked on some of their biggest deals, including the restructuring of Lloyds Banking. At UBS, he went on to become Global Head of Investment Banking, co-CEO of UBS Investment Bank and finally CEO of UBS AG in APAC. He served on the Group Executive Board at UBS AG. In 2012 he joined Bank of America Merrill Lynch as the President of their business in Europe, Middle East and Africa. Today, Alex is a Partner at Perella Weinberg Partners' advisory business based in London, having joined in September 2018. He has regularly been ranked as one of the 100 most influential people in the City.

Alex was a Vice President of Save the Children UK from 2008 – 2014 and a member of the University of Bristol Centenary Campaign Board from 2009 – 2014. He was also on the Advisory Board of The Sutton Trust until 2018. Today he serves on the Advisory Board of the National Theatre.

Court docs appear to suggest that Jeffrey Epstein may have met princes William and Harry

The creepy billionaire's maintenance man at his Palm Beach mansion, Juan Alessi, is quoted in the court docs as saying that he, as a worker of Epstein's, had met "Prince Diana's secretary with her children".

His testimony was among more than 2,000 pages relating to the defamation case filed by Virginia Giuffre – who previously claimed she had sex with Prince Andrew "three times."

The Duke of York vehemently denies all allegations made against him. When quizzed about the statement Alessi declined to comment – as did a spokesman for the two princes when approached by The Sun.

During testimony relating to "celebrities" he had personally met while working for Epstein, Mr Alessi reeled off a list of names, but no other context was given in the court papers.

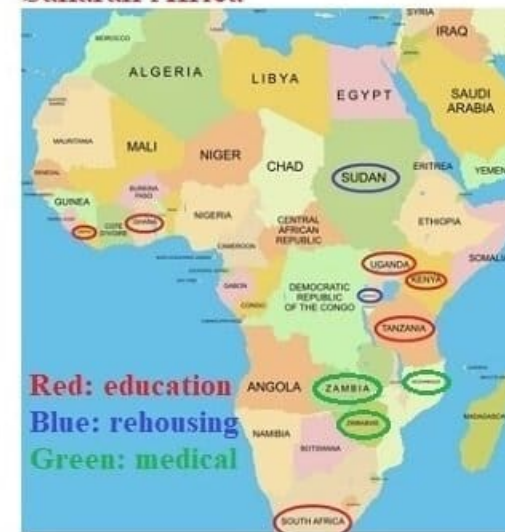

His full quote said: "I then listed Senator Mitchell, Prince Andrew, Princess Sarah Ferguson, Miss Yugoslavia, Miss Germany, Alan Dershowitz, Princess Diana's secretary with her children, Mr Trump, Mr Robert Kennedy Jr, Frederik Fekkai, and a couple Noble prize winners as celebrities that I had seen while working for Mr Epstein."

Petronella Wyatt and Boris Johnson https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Talk:Petronella_Wyatt

It is interesting to note the similar career paths taken by both. Both PW and BJ were journalists for The Daily Telegraph and then moved over to The Spectator where PW was Deputy Editor and BJ the Editor.

I found this excerpt in a profile in The Independent about PW at The Spectator - written in 1999 - about how her days were apparently numbered once BJ took over as Editor:

Boris has also boldly tackled "the problem of Petronella": he is in the process of finding a new deputy editor to replace Petronella Wyatt, the daughter of the late Lord Wyatt of Weeford. Everyone, including Johnson, is being diplomatic about "Petsy". "It's true that she is stepping down as deputy editor, that she no longer holds that great office of state at The Spectator," says Johnson, "but she will continue to be an honoured and valued honcho with a title of some grandeur which is still being thrashed out."

Woodrow Lyle Wyatt, Baron Wyatt of Weeford (4 July 1918 – 7 December 1997) was a British politician, author, journalist and broadcaster, close to the Queen Mother, Margaret Thatcher and Rupert Murdoch. For the last twenty years of his life, he was chairman of the state betting organisation The Tote. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Woodrow_Wyatt Cavalcades of limos sweeping over the Thames caused a stir as 1,000 people came to Battersea power station to raise funds for the children's charity ARK. Inside the marquee, with its spectacular water-fountain display by Starlight, the top tables were presided over by ARK chairman Arpad Busson, sponsor Bloomberg CEO Lex Fenwick and Tim Hoare. Glowing with winter tans in a sea of hedge-fund honchos were Elle Macpherson, Suzanne Kapoor and Debbie von Bismark. Hugh Grant made it just in time to enjoy the record-breaking auction, which raised more than £11 million, with Jemima. Bidding rocketed to £220,000 for the chance to become the 11th Space Tourist, thanks to Richard Branson. And all the women were disappointed to find that the delicious man-in-a-bath who re-enacted the Levi's 501s as in a fountain was not up for auction.

Petronella Wyatt

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Petronella "Petsy" Aspasia Wyatt^[1] (born 6 May 1968) is a British journalist and author.

Early life and education [edit]

Wyatt was born on 6 May 1968 at 12 Devonshire Street, West London, England.^[2] Her parents were journalist and former Labour politician Woodrow Wyatt and his fourth wife, Hungarian-born Veronica "Verushka" Banzsky von Ambroz (née Racz).^{[3][4][5][6]}

Wyatt attended St Paul's Girls' School.^[7] She then began reading history at Worcester College, Oxford. Wyatt left the university within weeks of her first term, after, she says, suffering persistent bullying and harassment due to her father's position as friend of and political advisor to Margaret Thatcher.^[8] She subsequently read history at University College London.^[8]

Career [edit]

After graduating, Wyatt became a trainee journalist and later weekly columnist for the Sunday Telegraph in the early 1990s. She then worked for magazine The Spectator, where she was promoted to deputy editor.^[5]

Wyatt is known for her direct and playful interview style. In 1996, when interviewing the proposed Labour Minister for Women Janet Anderson, Anderson joked that "under Labour, women will become more promiscuous", which Wyatt reported as policy.^[9] Denis Healey regretted at the close of an interview with Wyatt that there was no time left for "rumpy pumpy".^[3]

Personal life [edit]

Between 2000 and 2004, Wyatt had an affair with the then editor of The Spectator and Conservative MP Boris Johnson.^[10] Johnson had promised to leave his wife, and the affair had resulted in a terminated pregnancy and a miscarriage.^[11] When her mother found out about the affair, she discussed it with the press.^{[5][10]} Johnson was fired from his shadow cabinet post by party leader Michael Howard for lying about the affair, after he had initially categorically denied it.^{[10][12]}

Sir Christopher Bland: an apology WE would like to correct certain aspects of Petronella Wyatt's interview with Sir Christopher Bland ('Bland blows a fuse', 13 November). We accept that Sir Christopher did not shout at Miss Wyatt or otherwise behave in an aggressive or inappropriate manner. The summary on our cover — 'Sir Christopher Bland shouts at Petronella Wyatt' — was therefore unjustified. We also regret that we wrongly attributed certain remarks to Sir Christopher. He did not say, in relation to presenters, 'It's good for them to be afraid'; nor did he refer, in the context of life in the pre-television age, to 'bear-baiting and prostitutes'. Finally, Sir Christopher maintains, contrary to the impression we gave, that he watches plenty of tele- vision and said as much to Miss Wyatt. We apologise to Sir Christopher.

Box 3.4: The New Schools Network

The NSN has strong links with Absolute Return for Kids (ARK) and other academy sponsors. The organisation has among its trustees Amanda Spielman, research and development director of ARK Schools, who was recently a member of the Sykes review group commissioned by Michael Gove to review the future of the English qualifications and school assessment system, alongside ARK's education director and first headteacher of Mossbourne Academy, now Chief Inspector of Schools, Michael Wilshaw. It also has as a trustee Sir Bruce Liddington, Director General of E-ACT, a multi-academy sponsor, and formerly head of the Academies Division of DCSF and Schools Commissioner for England, and Ian Cleland, Chief Executive of the Ormiston Academies Trust, another multi-academy sponsor. Heath Monk, one of NSN's advisers, is Chief Executive of the Future Leaders programme and the former Deputy Schools Commissioner. Sally Morgan is another NSN adviser who is also an adviser to the ARK Board. She is a former Director of Government Relations at 10 Downing Street and senior adviser to Tony Blair, as was Professor Julian Le Grand, also an NSN adviser. Baroness Morgan is also a Governor of Belvedere School, a Girls' Public Day School Trust school-turned-academy that has been heavily supported by Peter Lampl, founder of the Sutton Trust. Also on the Board of NSN is Theodore Agnew, a trustee of Policy Exchange. Another NSN trustee, Christine Homer, formerly part of Andrew Adonis's academy team, worked on the Havelock Academy as adviser to the David Ross Foundation. Toby Eccles, another NSN adviser, is former UBS associate and head of research with ARK, and a non-executive director of Antidote, a charity developing emotional intelligence in schools, and also Development Director of Social Finance, a charity bank founded by leading city financiers. NSN also has international links, for example through its adviser James Merriman, chief executive officer of the New York City Charter School Center, which serves as a

Daily Telegraph rebuked over Toby Young's Covid column

Press watchdog says claims were 'significantly misleading' as newspaper told to publish correction

Toby Young admitted he had 'got that wrong' when he wrote last June that 'the virus has all but disappeared'. Photograph: Ken McKay/ITV/Rex/Shutterstock

An article by Toby Young for the Daily Telegraph was "significantly misleading" when it said that catching a cold could protect people from coronavirus and claimed that London was approaching herd immunity, the press regulator has ruled.

Young was educated at Creighton School (now Fortismere School), Muswell Hill and King Edward VI Community College, Totnes. Young later claimed that he was not popular at school, writing, "My only friend was a black boy called Remi, who explained that the reason he'd taken a shine to me was because he knew what it was like to be a 'nigger'."^[18] He left school at 16 having failed all but one of his O Levels, a C in English Literature,^[19] and worked under a Government Youth Training Scheme.^[citation needed] He then retook his O Levels and went to the Sixth Form of William Ellis School, Highgate, leaving with two Bs and a C at A Level. Having applied to study Philosophy, Politics and Economics (PPE) at Oxford University, he had been given a conditional offer of three Bs plus an O Level pass in a foreign language from Brasenose College, under a scheme to provide university access to comprehensive pupils. Despite thus failing to achieve the offer, he was nevertheless awarded a place to study at the college.^{[20][21][22]} Young said he was sent an acceptance letter by mistake, as well as a letter of rejection from the admissions tutor Harry Judge. In an article he wrote for The Spectator, he said that his father phoned Judge to clarify the situation – Judge was in a meeting with the PPE tutors at the time, and after some discussion, they decided to offer Young a place owing to a moral obligation the mistaken acceptance created.^{[22][23]}
